The 12th Olympic Winter Games came to a close at Innsbruck in typical homespun Austrian fashion Sunday with children showering the athletes with flowers. Russia and East Germany dominated the games, taking a majority of the medals, and Canada made its best showing since 1960, finishing in 11th place. Kathy Krutner won a gold in skiing. Cathy Priestner a silver in speed skating and Miller Cranston a bronze in figure skating. (Page 14)

The Bernie Sparkes rink from Burnaby had some close calls but took the unbeaten road to capture the Pacific Coast men's championship Sunday at Victoria Curling Club. Sparkes now faces Kamloops' Darryl Will in a best-of-three provincial final that gets under way at Victoria Club this evening at 7. Page 19.

Victoria sprinter Joyce Yakubovich, who captured two gold medals in the Pan-American Games in Mexico, set another double Saturday in an indoor track and field meet at Winnipeg. She won the women's 400 metres and anchored Canada's 4x100-metre relay team to a victory that produced a Canadian open record. Page 18.

String Of Bombs Exploded

BELFAST (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army exploded a string of bombs around British Army headquarters in downtown Belfast today, seriously damaging the city's main post office and forcing evacuation of the high command.

The bombings, plus attacks on two British Army outposts outside town, were seen as another phase of the IRA campaign of revenge for the death of hunger striker Frank Stagg last week.

Although no deaths were reported in the latest incidents, they followed the massacre of three Catholic women Sunday night in a farmhouse north of Belfast.

Beirut Man Shot Down

TIRES NEWS SERVICES
BEIRUT, Lebanon — Gunmen shot and killed a municipal worker in Beirut today, scattering pedestrians, and shopkeepers from streets in the area and jolting the slow recovery from 10 months of civil war.

Meanwhile, Syrian pressure brought Moslem and leftist leaders into line today behind the political reforms designed to end the Moslem-Christian civil war in Lebanon.

After a series of conferences with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam, some retracted statements rejecting the Syrian-sponsored reforms, which President Suleiman Frangieh announced Saturday night. Radical Palestinian guerrilla groups toned down their objections.

MPLA WILLING TO NEGOTIATE?

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — The government is treating with cautious optimism reports that the Soviet-backed Popular Movement (MPLA) in Angola is prepared to talk rather than fight South African forces in southern Angola, informed sources said today.

But no contacts, direct or indirect, have yet been made. South Africa has indicated it would withdraw its forces, believed to number 4,000 or 5,000 men, if it were given guarantees of the safety of important hydroelectric installations there and an assurance that the border would be respected.

Cabinet ministers were giving careful study today to a statement by the MPLA foreign minister, Jose Eduardo dos Santos, in a French newspaper interview, that South Africa could protect its interests in Angola if it recognized the MPLA government in Luanda.

Following that, MPLA leader Agostinho Neto has reportedly to have undertaken in a speech that the MPLA would not intrude in South-West Africa.

THIEVES SHOW GOOD TASTE

VANCOUVER (UPI) — City police are looking for thieves with gourmet palates after a weekend robbery at a West-End restaurant.

Police said that in addition to taking a fur coat and a leather coat, a man and two women carted off 10 lobster tails, six tins of escargots, 20 New York steaks, 10 pork tenderloins, 24 top sirloin steaks, 10 prawns and 15 shrimp.

They also took four bottles of sauce for seasoning and a box of strawberry cheese cake for dessert.

Police estimated the value of the stolen items at $900.

Flights Disrupted

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada flights were disrupted today when about 150 ramp workers at Montreal's Dorval airport walked off the job in protest against the suspension of a union shop steward, an Air Canada spokesman said.

The workers, members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, walked off at the start of the 7 a.m. shift and there was no indication when they would return, he said.

Icelandic Strike?

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — Iceland's 40,000 private employees, demanding higher wages and benefits, threatened to go on a nationwide strike at midnight tonight, paralyzing this island nation of 200,000 population.

Flu Sweeps Britain

LONDON (UPI) — One person in every 50 in Britain has the flu, health officials estimated today. They said about 150 deaths related to the disease were reported last week, compared with 70 the week before. Hospitals were on "yellow alert," cutting down on routine admissions to make room for flu victims.

Peron Challenged

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Bombs exploded at seven sites in the Buenos Aires area today at the outset of a 24-hour strike by shop-owners, industrialists, cattle-men and farmers challenging the authority of President Isabel Peron. Police reported bombs caused damage at five Fiat auto agencies and two bank branch offices in the capital and suburbs early today.

Citizens' Group Rejects Munro's Blockade Call

Concerned Citizens' Association organizer Norman Black said today he won't support road blockades to protest sharp increases in Autoplan insurance rates.

He said the association had tried to be responsible in its opposition to the rates imposed by the B.C. Insurance Corp. of B.C., and in calling for a rollback on premiums to no more than 20 per cent of 1975 rates.

He termed "unfortunate" statements by B.C. Federation of Labor vice-president Jack Munro Saturday suggesting protests take the form of blockading roads and bridges to force a rollback.

"At this time we wouldn't endorse that action. But we can't govern what individual conscience dictates," Black said.

Asked today about Munro's remarks, ICBC president Pat McGeer said if the B.C. Federation of Labor wants to come into the insurance business the government would welcome them.

"We don't want to have the insurance business exclusively in B.C., so the B.C. Federation can come in."

The Concerned Citizens' Association, co-sponsored by the B.C. Federation of Labor, is concentrating its efforts on organizing more members and co-ordinating ideas for opposing the high cost of auto insurance.

Black said a petition which has been circulating for a month on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island will be taken to other parts of the province and it was hoped 750,000 signatures — nearly all car owners — would be obtained.

He said the association expected to be in a better bargaining position when the legislature opens March 17.

Munro, regional president of International Woodworkers of America, said Saturday in Prince George motorists might have to consider blockading roads, and bridges "to force a rollback in auto insurance rate increases."

Replying to a question from one of 350 people attending a rally protesting premium increases by ICBC, Munro said he is not in favor of trying to organize a general strike on the issue because it wouldn't be successful.

"There are a lot of other things people can do to keep this issue alive and pressure the government to roll back these exorbitant increases."

"If the government keeps ignoring protest demonstrations and petitions, we might have to consider blockading roads and bridges."

Vancouver "could practically be paralyzed by using 400 or 500 cars to blockade the four main bridges," he said.

In Prince George, "the same thing could be achieved by blockading key roads, especially access routes to the city."

In an earlier speech to the rally, Munro said everybody in B.C. should go on the same day to buy their car insurance at ICBC offices or motor vehicle branch offices, "and cause one giant traffic jam."

Munro's suggestion received enthusiastic applause from the audience but was not put to the rally for formal endorsement.

The meeting passed a resolution calling for a rollback of ICBC rate increases to no more than 20 per cent greater than last year and for restoration of the 348 territorial discount for northern motorists.

Insurance rates have doubled for many motorists and have increased threefold for unmarried male drivers under 25 years of age.

Coffee, Oil Prices Set to Zoom

Coffee prices will rise 40 cents per 16-ounce jar within two weeks and heating oil will rise 4.5 cents a gallon to 43.5 cents as the provincial price-freeze has come to an end.

Supermarket spokesmen said prices would rise gradually, dictated in part by what competing firms do. The freeze ended at midnight Sunday.

First to rise would be those items that were at unusually low levels when the freeze began Oct. 24, such as manufacturer's specials.

(Retail specials could be raised to normal levels during the freeze.)

Beginning next week prices will begin to rise on those products under severe cost pressure, mainly coffee, fish, soup and paper products.

Heating oil was caught in the freeze and companies are entitled to an increase of 4.5 cents a gallon on the basis of costs.

Food-price increases will be on selected items only. There is no indication of an across-the-board increase for food.

With the ending of the provincial freeze, the only controls are under the federal anti-inflation program, which requires companies to justify all price increases on the basis of higher costs.

Ken Murdoch, spokesman for the provincial department of consumer services, said his department will continue to monitor food and energy prices in B.C. but now will be doing it to help the federal program rather than in connection with its own legislation.

Consumer complaints about price increases are being referred to the Revenue Canada

HOLIDAY PAY CLAIMED

B.C. Government Employees' Union filed a grievance today against the government's decision to rescind Heritage Day.

Union general secretary John Fryer said about 35,000 government employees are entitled to holiday pay despite the government's decision not to recognize the holiday.

According to the government's contract with the BCGEU Heritage Day was to be recognized as a designated paid holiday once it was proclaimed by cabinet.

An order-in-council Jan. 20 set today as Heritage Day but the order was rescinded Friday and this week was designated Heritage Week instead.

After realizing at the last minute that the proclamation entitled BCGEU members to the holiday, the government is trying to wriggle out of this obligation by playing sleight-of-hand tricks with orders-in-council," Fryer said.

He said one solution of the grievance would be double time pay for government employees working today for a total cost to the government of $4 million.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said that when the cabinet proclaimed Feb. 16 as heritage day, it did not know it was entitling 35,000 provincial government employees to a holiday.

Mrs. McCarthy said the government proclaimed the holiday on the understanding the federal government would be making a similar proclamation but this is not expected until next year. She said the federal proclamation was needed to make Feb. 16 a statutory holiday on the provincial level.

She said heritage week will recognize the province's heritage as well as heritage day without costing the province $4 million.

New Airline Chiefs

OTTAWA (CP) — A new president and a new chairman for Air Canada are expected to be named here today ending almost three months of uncertainty in the airline.

An aide to Transport Minister Otto Lang said that the announcements are expected at a late afternoon news conference.

The aide would not say who has been appointed but it is expected that Claude Taylor, now Air Canada's vice-president of public affairs will become president and chief executive officer.

Pierre Des Marais, a Montreal businessman and Air Canada director, is believed to be the new chairman.

Yves Pratte resigned in a bitter mood as chairman and chief executive officer in late November. He had been under constant fire from politicians and newspapers for his administration of the airline.

BOY, 9, SAVES SISTERS IN FIRE

Three children, scrambled to safety after a house caught fire on the East Saanich Indian Reserve Saturday night while their parents were away.

A police spokesman said Toby Joseph, 9, telephoned his father, Gary Joseph, at the Sidney home at 8:50 p.m. after oil from a cook stove had spilled on the floor and ignited.

The father told him to get the other children and leave the house, the RCMP spokesman said.

Toby roused his two younger sisters, Coleen, 6, and Edna, 3, and led them outside.

The three-bedroom wood frame house was gutted. The fire was put out by members of the Central Saanich volunteer fire department.

Victoria Traveller Is Safe

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst today led the jury in her bank robbery trial on a tour of the hideouts where she was held in closets following her kidnapping two years ago.

Under tight security, the seven women and five men on the jury, accompanied by Miss Hearst, attorneys and U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter, stopped first at a tiny third floor apartment just one mile from the courtroom. The tour was requested by the defence to show the jury the conditions under which she was held.

The apartment was the second location where Miss Hearst was held by the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA), and the apartment which was used at the time of the bank robbery.

The jury also was to visit the house in Daly City, immediately south of San Francisco, where Miss Hearst was taken immediately after her kidnapping.

A crowd of neighbors stood on the sidewalk outside the apartment building as Miss Hearst arrived, accompanied by U.S. marshals, and the 21-year-old newspaper heiress was rushed inside the building through dozens of photographers and reporters.

Windows in other apartment houses all along the street, Golden Gate Avenue, were lined with more neighbors watching the scene on the street below.

Miss Hearst, who wore a beige raincoat over brown slacks and a multicolored blouse, arrived in a sedan in a drizzling rain.

The closet in which Miss Hearst said she was held is L-shaped, about five feet by eight feet. Each of the two doors to the closet had two holes drilled in it.

The apartment currently is unoccupied and is being repaired. Two tenants have lived there since the SLA left in the spring of 1974.

The building manager opened the apartment to newsmen, but it was emptied by marshals before Miss Hearst arrived.

The purpose of the visit, Miss Hearst's attorneys hope, is to help convince the jurors of the conditions she faced as a kidnapping victim.

There was no testimony in the trial today because of the Washington's Birthday holiday.

basic determinants of concentration; that the negative impacts of high concentration include:

• Overstoring (that is, too many stores either too large or too small to be optimally efficient), and extra profits which lead to higher price levels;

• Less product variety and less free service.

By high concentration, Malen means there are too few organizations with too much of the business — a form of oligopoly, or semi-monopoly, which he says is most marked in the Prairies.

The four leading firms in Calgary, for example, have 92 per cent of that city's market, according to 1973 data. In Winnipeg the figure is 81 per cent while in Edmonton it is 93 per cent.

As the cities change, so do the identities of the four leading organizations in them — Safeway, for example, does not operate east of Ontario nor Steinberg west of Ontario. But Malen said that increasing concentration is "basically due to the four national giants" rather than to large local competitors.

He also says, "There is a definite correlation between high concentration and high profits," with profits highest in the Prairies.

The Malen study analyses only one of the various links in the process by which food goes from the farm gate to the consumer: the store. It makes no attempt to isolate this retailing link as the scapegoat for high food prices.

While it says reduced concentration and more efficient stores could cut shoppers' bills by four per cent, the report adds: "These potential cost savings seem rather modest in terms of the 15-per cent, annual, food-price inflation that has been experienced in the last few years. Therefore, the focus of the price battle must remain on inflation, a phenomenon to which, fortunately, concentration does not appear to contribute."

Malen suggests Ottawa take a two-pronged approach to invigorating competition: • Restrict further expansion by the big retail chains in markets where they are already big;

• "Eliminate shopping-centre discrimination," whereby big supermarkets are invited into shopping centres often because the supermarkets own them, as is the case with Steinberg's which owns about 30 such centres.

These and more efficient stores could, he calculates, save consumers in Calgary and Edmonton about seven per cent, in Winnipeg three per cent and in Bramford, Hamilton, Windsor and Ottawa at least two per cent.

Skelton Quits Post at UVic

Robin Skelton has resigned as chairman of University of Victoria's creative writing department, but will continue teaching in the department he set up.

Dr. John Woods, associate dean of arts and science, said today Skelton has been ill since Christmas and on doctor's advice has decided to cut back on his workload at University. Woods said he accepted Skelton's resignation with regret.

He also confirmed there was "some degree of disagreement" within the department on how matters of curriculum and internal procedures were being handled prior to the Christmas break, "but frankly I'd be surprised if there was ever total unanimity within a department."

When Skelton learned of "some reservations" among faculty, he created a number of department committees to conduct affairs of the department.

"Where in the past the chairman assumed a large leadership role, under the new policy the committee is now required to do much of the work. Some members think this is desirable while some others think less well of it," Woods said.

Woods has been acting chairman but an interim chairman will be appointed until a permanent chairman is nominated by a faculty search committee.

Skelton became the first chairman of the creative writing when the department was established at the beginning of the 1974-75 academic year. He joined the staff of UVic in 1963 in the English department, and became director of the creative writing program in 1967.

He is also editor of the Malahat Review, a UVic quarterly with international distribution.

School Budget Review by April

The provincial government's review of the Greater Victoria school board's $46.8 million budget will be completed by mid-April, an education department official said today.

The budget will be assessed with all district budgets during March and final decision will be made by April 20, department financial supervisor Inge Valens said.

Any allocations within the budget may be altered or reduced, depending on the review.

He said the government will assess the budget in terms of teacher salary awards (13.3 per cent increase), school population (declining by 3.6 per cent) and the amount of budget increase (20 per cent over last year).

Department officials will schedule a meeting with school board administration at which time trustees may make a submission.

Following Friday's school board meeting which approved the budget, trustee Peter Dunn and chairman Bill Ross said chances are good the budget will be cut back.

Vic High Rings In The Old

The centennial celebrations for Victoria School will be officially opened Friday by Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen.

Owen will do the honors by ringing an old school bell at a

2 p.m. ceremony on the front steps of the school, believed the oldest public high school west of the Great Lakes and north of San Francisco.

Mayor Mike Young and deputy provincial secretary Lawrie Wallace, chairman of the celebrations committee, will attend.

About 3,000 have indicated they will attend the centennial celebrations in May and a total of 5,000 former teachers and pupils are expected. Registration fee of $3 can be sent to Box 1976 Victoria, including name, present address and years of attendance at the school.

A membership booth will be open on Friday and Saturday at the Hillside Shopping Centre.

Fire Chief Eric Simpson said the fire was supplying power for lighting and the operation of power tools on the construction site.

Simmons placed damage at $25,000 up from the $15,000 just estimated.

One fireman, Terry Gains, fell two storeys when a floor collapsed beneath him as he stood in a bathtub to fight the flames, but escaped with hip bruises.

Insufficient stock has caused a delay in the opening of the roe herring season.

The first two areas to be fished were due to be opened at 2 p.m. Sunday but this has now been tentatively postponed until the same time next Sunday.

Confirmation of the new opening date will be made before noon on Wednesday.

The areas to be fished then are roughly from Curtis Point at Sidney to Active Pass and from Lasqueti Island off Parksville to Salt Spring Island.

"It's the ripeness of the roe herring that's going to call it," fisheries officer Lloyd Gudewill said today. "Roe herring has to be just perfect before they can take it."

Fire Caused By Short

A short circuit in an extension wire caused last Thursday's fire in a four-storey 25-suite spirit shop under construction at 138 Gorge, Victoria, fire officials have determined.

Fire Chief Eric Simpson said the wire was supplying power for lighting and the operation of power tools on the construction site.

Wagner Against Olympic Aid

WAGNER
... in Victoria

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The Canadian government has a letter on file from Premier Bourassa saying Quebec will not ask for federal aid to finance the Olympic Games and Ottawa must hold Quebec to that promise. Conservative leadership candidate Claude Wagner said in Victoria Saturday.

"No special grants should be made to Quebec. If something is done for Quebec, why not the other provinces, too? No, the federal government must be firm."

Wagner made the comments in an interview after a closed-meeting with Victoria delegates who will attend this week's leadership convention in Ottawa.

The Quebec MP is considered among the frontrunners to succeed Robert Stanfield.

"I hope the Olympic Games will be successful. But as for the financing, the Quebec premier has said in a letter he will not look to the federal government for a grant and he must stick to that commitment."

While it would be wrong to give any province special treatment, a Conservative government should grant more provincial autonomy than exists at the present time, he said.

"That is the true meaning of federalism. Less federal government involvement in provincial affairs."

On economic issues, Wagner adopts a traditional Conservative stance of less government spending, a reduction in the federal "bureaucracy" and reduced spending by Crown corporations.

"He said the anti-inflation program should be dismantled in less than three years."

Within 18 months the federal government should consult Parliament on whether there is any value in continuing the program.

Wagner said it appears to be failing in its main objective of easing the burden of inflation upon fixed income groups.

There has been some success in controlling incomes but almost none in controlling prices.

"Both business and labor are unhappy with the program because it is not working."

Wagner declined to discuss a statement by the other major leadership candidate from Quebec, Brian Mulroney, that there was a bit of a feud between the two men.

"There is no feud, just a campaign," Wagner said. "I do not discuss other personalities."

Mulroney during a visit to Victoria in January had said there was some bitterness because of the heated campaign for delegates in Quebec.

Wagner also attended a meeting in Comox Saturday before returning to Ottawa.

A window demonstration of carding and spinning Sarnich Peninsula fleece will be held at Village Crafts, 2170 Oak Bay Ave., from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

Heritage Preservation Awards to Victorians

Architectural historian Martin Segger was presented with a major award by Heritage Canada in Victoria today, one of four B.C. residents honored for their work in heritage preservation.

Another winner was Carl Rudolph, for his restoration of Higgin's Hall, a house dating from the 1880s at Fort and St. Charles.

The awards were presented by Pierre Berton, one of the governors of Heritage Canada, in a luncheon ceremony at The Empress.

Segger, 29, wins a three-week tour of a European country of his choice. He intends visiting Britain, probably late this summer, to examine conservation programs there.

Heritage Canada is a federal non-profit organization, launched three years ago with a $12 million grant from Ottawa. With a membership of about 10,000, it is associated with about 100 conservation organizations across Canada, including about 15 in B.C.

Besides making annual awards it has spent several million dollars purchasing heritage properties and areas for preservation.

Segger is in charge of training workers in museum techniques throughout the province. He is now on leave from that job while he conducts an assessment of training programs and needs for the National Museums Corporation of Canada.

Chairman of the heritage advisory committee to city council, he is co-author of a recent report on heritage buildings worth preserving in the city core. He lectures on renaissance history in art at the University of Victoria.

A book by him on the history of Victoria's architecture is to be published soon and he has been a frequent speaker locally on heritage preservation.

Rudolph wins a plaque from Heritage Canada for his work on Higgin's Hall where he lives. Restoration took about a decade and the house is open to the public during the summer.

A three-storey structure classified as Victoria Italianate, it was built by a former owner and editor of the Colonist, David Higgins.

The other two provincial winners receiving awards today are Archie Miller and Alan Woodland of New Westminster. They got citations for books on New West's architecture and history as well as for radio and television productions on the subject.

The Hallmark Society, of Victoria, today opened a display at the Provincial Museum as its contribution to Heritage Week.

It depicts seven notable demolitions of historic homes in Victoria between 1937 and 1975.

Past vice-president Terry Reksten said there also is a positive aspect about the society's recognition of this week: six members of the group have written to city council volunteering their own homes as heritage buildings should council wish to designate them.

These include the structure at 1702 Fernwood, home of Mrs. Katherine Massey, and 805 Linden, home of Karen and Michael Wyatt.

"It's a way of showing we're not always wanting to force our views on others," Reksten said.

House Fire Kills Man

DUNCAN — RCMP are checking dental charts today in an effort to establish the identity of a man burned to death in a house fire on Tzouhalem Road Saturday night.

A spokesman said the body was found inside the house after members of the North Cowichan fire department had extinguished the blaze.

The spokesman said the man was possibly a native Indian between 30 to 35 years of age.

The cause of the fire, which was reported at 8 p.m., has not been determined.

Police believe the man was alone in the house.

Golf Clubs Taken

About $300 worth of golf clubs were stolen from the pro shop at Uplands Golf Club Friday night, Oak Bay police said today.

A police spokesman said the front door of the shop had been kicked in.

GAMBLING SHIP OUT, SAYS DAVIS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The government cruise ship Prince George is for sale but not to gambling interests, Transport Minister Jack Davis said Saturday.

The minister was commenting on a statement by Bob Williams, resources minister in the former New Democratic Party government, who said Friday he understood a secret buyer representing gambling interests hopes to get the vessel.

Davis said Williams was imagining things.

The ship was purchased by the NDP administration from Canadian National Railways for $230,000. It was hit by fire last year before it was sold.

Davis said it would cost $75,000 to bring it up to operating standards.

"The main reason we are disposing of the Prince George is that we are in a period of financial stringency," he said.

Davis said Williams' motive in making the statement about selling to gambling interests was to cover up the

Helmcken Rites Set

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon for long-time Victoria resident Miss Ethel Helmcken who died Friday after a long illness.

Miss Helmcken, 82, was the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jim Helmcken, the granddaughter of John Sabastion Helmcken and the great-granddaughter of Sir James Douglas.

Service at 2 p.m. is being arranged by Hayward's Funeral Chapel.

Miss Helmcken is survived by one sister, Mrs. G. W. Watson of Vancouver, and two brothers, Dr. J. S. Helmcken of Santa Anna, Calif., and Ainslie Helmcken, Victoria city architect.

Naval Reunion

Vice-Admiral Harry Porter (ret.) will be one of hundreds of former naval communicators who will be in Halifax, N.S., to attend a three-day reunion July 9-11.

USE THE GOVERNMENT'S OWN RULES TO SAVE A BUNDLE ON INCOME TAX.

TAX SAVINGS OPPORTUNITY #1.

Many people are eligible for this tax savings opportunity so there should be smiles aplenty. Husbands where the family home is in their wife's name. Income earning wives where the family home is in their husband's name. And all apartment dwellers and others who don't own a home.

This tax savings opportunity is called a Canada Trust Home Ownership Savings Plan and the money you deposit in this Plan is tax free if you eventually use it to buy a home or home furnishings (a cottage may also qualify). An individual making around $10,000 could realize yearly tax savings of $300. As well, the money deposited to the Plan earns good interest.

You can find out about the Canada Trust Home Ownership Savings Plan through a handy booklet available at our branches. But hurry, you'll have to act now to save on '75 income tax.

TAX SAVINGS OPPORTUNITY #2.

If you're a wage earner you can start smiling because a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan can probably save you a bundle on income tax while you sock away money for the future.

Say, for example you're married with two dependent children and make around $15,000; you could save as much as $1,000 on '75 income tax. And if both husband and wife are income earners, both can set up a Plan.

Short of cash? We can probably help you start a Plan and get your deduction against '75 income tax with a Canada Trust "Retirement Savings Loan". In most cases it can be arranged right on the spot and with no red tape.

Even if you're already in a pension plan at work, it makes sense to take advantage of this tax saving since a company pension may not be enough to guarantee you a comfortable retirement on its own.

With a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan there's no sales commission to pay and your money isn't locked in forever. In fact, should you decide to forget the whole thing, you can get your money out. (But if you do, you'll have to pay the appropriate income tax.)

We also have a handy booklet explaining all about the Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan. Call or drop in and get the details. But, as with tax savings opportunity #1, you'll have to act now to save on '75 income tax.

Police Circus

The fund-raising arrangements of the Victoria Police Mutual Benefit Association, detailed in the Times on Friday by reporter Derek Sidenius, are rather curious, to say the least.

No one argues that the association hasn't accomplished many good works over the years. But how many more could have been carried out if the police weren't spending some of the money on themselves.

What grates most about the whole set-up is the petty sham surrounding it—the fact that the telephone girls soliciting the public to buy circus tickets list all the charities which benefit, but not the police themselves who take a large share. If the public knew this beforehand, it would put an entirely different slant on this particular "charity" appeal.

It is selfish of the police to use public donations to charity for their own purposes. Why not do as other police forces, indeed most every other office or company or union in the city does, put the bite on your own members for retirement gifts or death benefits? It's unfair to get the public to pay for these, as well as paying the policemen very good salaries.

Most people approached to buy tickets for the police circus were probably unaware that a professional fund-raising organization does all the soliciting, for which it takes a percentage of the gross. If the Victoria police want to perform good works for the community, why not undertake them directly as for example, the firemen do for muscular dystrophy, or the various service clubs do for other good causes?

What the police do with their own money is their business, but we think in this case they owe the public an explanation if not an apology. What is the association doing building up an investment portfolio, partly with public donations, that gets bigger every year?

It's good to see that the association president has some doubts about the propriety of this particular facet of its operations. This questioning attitude should be extended to the circus promotion and the practice of quietly keeping some of the proceeds which we all thought went to charity. The whole situation seems overdue for change.

The association's big lottery win provides an easy means of putting things right again. If the police wish to continue their charitable contributions, fine and good. Perhaps they could put the entire $250,000 into a trust fund to provide an annual income for this and the association's other purposes. But don't ask the public to pay for police perquisites.

Whither the Liberals?

Prime Minister Trudeau took some time from his visit to British Columbia last week to talk to provincial Liberal party officials and, according to one account, displayed a questioning interest in the Grits' rock-bottom state of affairs on the west coast.

According to Kyle Mitchell, treasurer of the B.C. party, the PM was very interested in the results of the provincial election in December and "got people's views on what happened, why we are at the state we are, why we are this level, which is a poor level."

None of the Liberal brass volunteered any explanations for the Liberals' sad state in B.C. Perhaps they consider it, like certain other truths, to be self-evident.

But somebody ought to explain what's happened to the Liberal party in B.C. At least the 86,000 people who voted for the Grits in the last provincial election, and the 336,435 voters who cast ballots for federal Liberal candidates in B.C. in 1974 deserve an explanation.

To the most intriguing question: why did the Liberals do so poorly, to us it seems the most immediate reason is that there exists a strong de facto alliance between some Liberals and provincial Social Crediters.

The subsidiary reasons are five in number and their names are Allan Williams, Pat McGeer, Garde Gardom, Jack Davis and Bill Vander Zalm — staunch Liberals all until last year when they saw a chance to exercise power and switched. And who was first to congratulate these men with telegrams and phone calls upon their successful election the night of Dec. 11? Why their former colleagues in Ottawa, men like Senator Ray Perrault, government leader in the upper house.

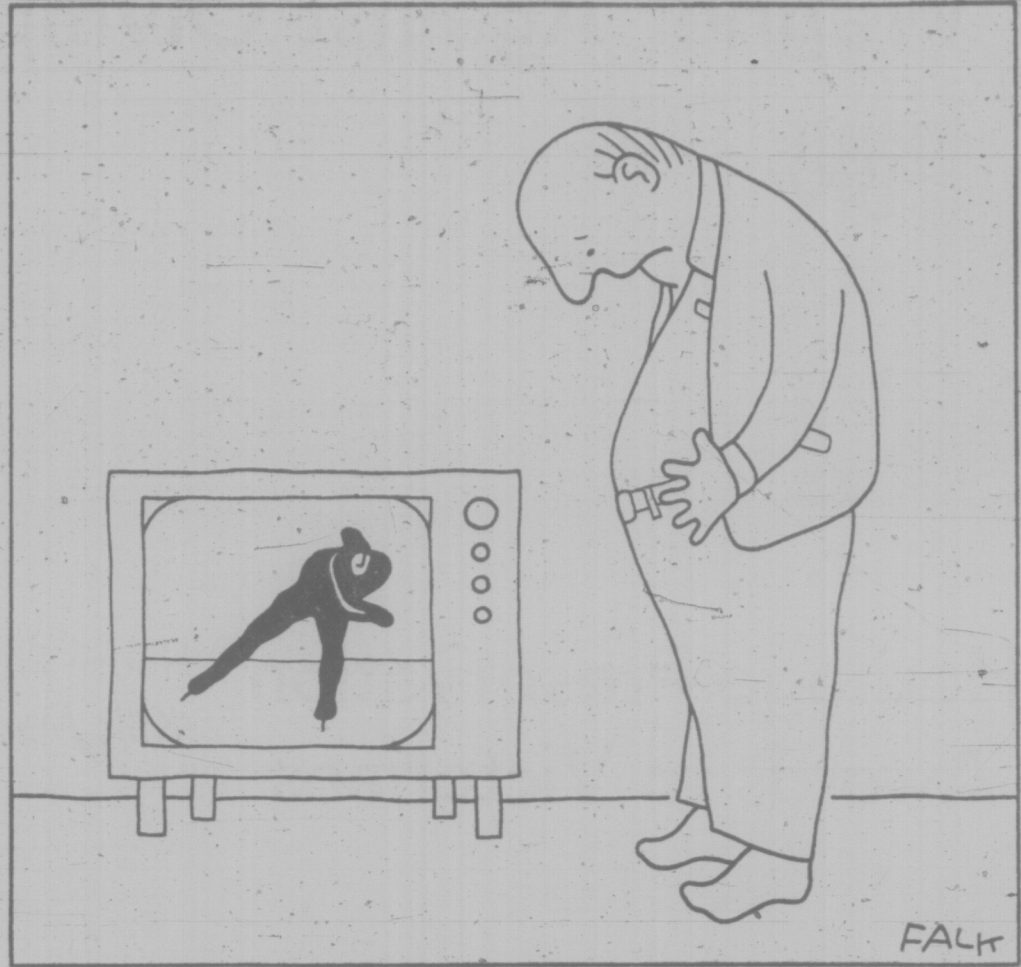

During the campaign itself, the Socials got help from the prime minister's office itself in the purloined telegram affair. They were even offered a copy of the message by the PMO, according to one Social.

Need more evidence? Look at the list of so-called Liberal lawyers in the city who do federal government business, which Conservative MP Allan McKinnon wangled out of Justice Minister Ron Basford. One of them, Ian Stewart, was a staunch worker behind the Social effort in the Victoria region in the 1975 election.

Of course, the situation in part reflects the sentiments of B.C. voters. Just one-quarter of those who voted Liberal in the 1974 federal election voted the same way in the 1975 provincial election. But the federal Liberals didn't have to encourage the trend. They took the easy way, pragmatically writing off the B.C. Liberals as a credible alternative to the NDP and put their money on Social Credit.

The provincial scene is bound to have effects on the Liberals' federal performance. The present tenuous state of political schizophrenia may not endure.

Lincoln Insurance

A century ago a young lad, like many of his generation, had to walk long miles to school.

It wasn't because he could not afford insurance on his car. He had no car. Not even a bicycle. Only "Shanks' mare."

He came from an underprivileged home. There was no electric refrigerator to run to for after-school snacks. In fact, there was no electricity. No oil heating — only a log fire by whose flickering light he studied. No television. Not even a radio.

There was little prospect of his getting far in life. His education, in the formal sense, was elementary. Yet somehow he learned to read, write and spell. His school had no football team, no basketball team. No cheerleaders. No student demonstrations. No millions of taxpayer dollars to smooth the way. Yet somehow the boy who studied by the light of the burning logs grew up to be a lawyer. He became the author of the Gettysburg address.

And his was the hand that, as president of the United States of America, signed the document that in his land abolished the ownership of men by other men — that gave freedom to tens and tens of thousands of other underprivileged human beings.

His name was Lincoln. He never heard of the ICBC. — F. J. Picking, 2861 Admirals Road.

Status Quo Ante

I am very strongly opposed to proposed budget cuts by the Greater Victoria school board. It has taken a long time to reduce the student-teacher ratio and develop some of the programs being threatened by the cuts.

I am also sympathetic to parents who are protesting school closures, particularly those due to be moved to Highrock in grade seven. I have seen middle schools established with students as young as grade six. The parents of Lampson Street are justified in their fears of social damage. Once the child leaves the more protected environment of an elementary school, they start copying the dress and social patterns of the older pupils.

I hope at least a status quo budget can be maintained for next year. — Leslie Hogya, 3973 Bear Street.

Cans on Wheels

Trash cans on wheels seems a thoroughly bad idea. Even if all householders were young and vigorous people there would be many difficulties, but most are neither young nor always able-bodied. Garbage collection is an important and valuable necessity in any city life, and should be taken care of by men who are capable and adequately paid for the job. If some house holders over load their cans so that they are too heavy to handle, they should be required to double or treble their cans and be charged accordingly. — E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful Street.

Filth Flood

Less than two years ago The Salvation Army came out strong expressing its long held views against pornography and obscenity. The flood of filth has not abated, and many are the victims of moral perversion.

Magazine racks display an increased number of skin covers that would make a sensitive adult blush and cannot help but corrupt the minds of minors. Radio and television also has its share of perverse programs and one must continually be on guard against these offensive audiovisuals.

The problem is not localized, as borne out by a sexual code published by the Vatican last month. Speaking of a specific immoral act the declaration said it "is certainly to be linked with man's innate weakness following original sin but it is also to be linked with the loss of a sense of God, with the corruption of morals engendered by the commercialization of vice, with the unrestrained licentiousness of so many public entertainments and publications, as well as with the neglect of modesty, which is the guardian of chastity."

Only a few days ago a Victoria theatre manager expressed dismay at the thought of a fourth film classification being introduced in British Columbia, as proposed by assistant film classifier Roger Casey, because he realizes this would multiply the number of "skin flicks."

Concerned? Write the attorney-general, your elected member of parliament, member of the legislative assembly, municipal council and this newspaper. — Ivan McNeilly Major, Salvation Army, Victoria Citadel Corps, 757 Pandora Street.

From the Times of February 16, 1916
BERLIN, Ont. — The facts in regard to this Ontario town and its attitude on the war are given here in as full measure as can be secured by a press representative. The population of Berlin is about 20,000 but only 300 have enlisted in the Canadian armed forces. About 65 per cent of the population is of German origin. No registrar of enemy aliens has been appointed although the city council twice asked the government to do so, and only two incidents have occurred — a Lutheran minister was arrested for allegedly uttering pro-German sentiments but the charges were dropped, and a young man was bound over to keep the peace after a charge of sedition by maligning some Canadian soldiers.

TORONTO — The Judy LaMarsh travelling road show — that's the Ontario royal commission on violence in the communications industry — has had this problem of not being taken seriously ever since it was set up last May.

Ms. Judy and her fellow commissioners — Provincial Judge Lucien Beaulieu and Globe and Mail columnist Scott Young — held some 20 public hearings about the province before hitting Toronto a week ago, and hardly a ripple on the provincial pond had they caused. The media, it seems, were determined to ignore them, perhaps because the commission had been thought up by the Ontario government in the first place as a pre-election ploy to prove its concern — but not much else — over the trend to violence in modern society.

Judy LaMarsh, of course, is not one to accept such treatment without a fight and she apparently decided, as her commission wended its way to Toronto that she would make them notice her. That is the only plausible explanation for the commission's "interim report," issued just before its Toronto hearings.

This is a 71-page document in which the four pages signed by the commissioners themselves say nothing at all. But the 59 pages signed by the commission's director of research, C. K. Marchant, are something else. There in Marchant lists, as measures government could consider, the following:

- "Special provisions" in the case of non-broadcast media against "the distribution and sale of media content objectionable on grounds of violence."

Censor Violence?

- The licensing and regulation of non-broadcast media by an independent board in order to "supervise the social accountability" of such media.

- "Steps to alter the financial environment in which the media industries operate," including subsidies to make the media less dependent on advertising and a tax on "entertainment violence" which could be applied against the media or against advertisers in order to discourage violence.

- Legislation to make media organizations liable to legal action, particularly "class actions," for damages caused by media content or, alternatively, statutory recognition of "citizen-based media accountability bodies" on a local or regional basis.

All of this, and more, was put hypothetically as possible courses of government action, and commissioner Scott Young subsequently dismissed it all as stuff for the "never, never future." But if the commission had been trying to attract the indifferent bulls of the media, it couldn't have found a redder flag. The interim report got front-page treatment, including a thundering Globe and Mail editorial on press censorship ("Could any tyrant ask for more?"), and the commission's Toronto hearings got good coverage by all concerned for the rest of the week. Salute, Judy.

The sad thing, of course, is that violence in the media, especially in the so-called entertainment side of the media, is a very serious social problem and deserves to be treated more seriously than an exercise in headline hunting or political gamemanship.

Common Sense

The credibility of the LaMarsh Commission was clouded from the start. The government did nothing on its own of course, because it feared the cry of "censorship." Instead it claimed more research was necessary and so created the LaMarsh commission "to study the effects on society of the increasing exhibition of violence in the communications industry." One might as well have created an inquiry to study the history of mankind.

This is not to say that research into the sociological effects of exhibiting violence is not useful, but only that more research is not needed for the broad purposes of public policy.

If one accepts the obvious — that children learn, in large part, from observing the world around them and that the world now contains depictions of violence to an enormous extent (most children, for example, spend more time watching television during their school years than spent in school) — then it follows as night follows day that those children on reaching maturity will tend, as a generality, to regard violence as more or less acceptable behavior.

It can be proven, as it has been, by long-term sociological studies or it can be accepted as a matter of common sense.

If violence is then held to be undesirable, it follows that the teaching of violence should be prohibited. In short, public policy requires not research but political leadership, and the only rationale for a public inquiry in this area is to mount a show of public support for government action and in effect sustain the politicians against the cry of censorship which inevitably will be raised.

But the trouble with the LaMarsh inquiry is that it will be sustaining the wrong politicians. It should be reporting to Ottawa rather than Queen's Park because television is the main culprit, and the power to control television rests in Ottawa.

Mod Squad

TORONTO — The slaughter was quick and total, too easy in fact. John Bassett, president of CFTO, was, as he usually is, charming, quick on his feet, and thoroughly arrogant. Judy LaMarsh, the head of Ontario's royal commission on media violence, was out of character — timid, inept, and soft.

What did Bassett have to say, asked LaMarsh, about the effect on the self-image of Indians of old cowboy and Indian movies shown on his station? "The problems of Indians go far beyond old movies on TV," answered Bassett.

LaMarsh had no follow-up questions. Bassett did though. Could he read something into the record? Of course.

Bassett smiled and read out an advertisement by TV-Ontario to watch "for the first time," an uncut version of King Kong. "See the Great Ape — tear off Fay Wray's clothes — stamp a native to death — drop a woman from a great height — a whole new dimension of terror and violence."

That ad, said Bassett, belonged to a network owned by the same government that had set up the commission. The audience laughed and applauded.

From its start as a political gimmick, through to LaMarsh's decision to remain a broadcaster at the same time as she investigates the industry that employs her, the commission has wobbled off the edge of disaster. Now it has fallen right off.

The commission's interim report published last week contains the suggestion, more ludicrous and dangerous, that government should censor the media and license newspapers. The commissioners since have disowned these proposals with the explanation they were made only by their research director, an answer that begs the question — why publish them in the first place in a report signed by the commissioners?

Just as ludicrous but more dangerous is the commission's analysis of the relationship between violence in the media and violence in society. The entire argument is built, like an upside-down pyramid on the word "may" — the most insidious and slippery word in the English language. As in "media violence may be a central threat to Canadian society... we may be inundated with media violence that may be having negative social effects." On one page I counted 23 may's.

Sesame Street

Anything, provided it does not violate the laws of nature, may be. The same thing, equally, may not be. As in "media violence may not be a central threat to Canadian society." It may, for example, be a marginal threat. It may be no threat at all but be a mirror image of the unpleasant truth that many, many people do go to hockey and football games in the hopes of seeing blood and do stop at traffic accidents, not to help but as voyeurs.

And yet, and yet, and yet, there is a core of truth embedded in all this verbiage: A recent Australian study concludes that obsessive television watchers suffer brain damage, "a lowering of self-esteem, a confused sense of identity, narcissism." A U.S. study found that by high school, a child has watched "some 18,000 murders and countless highly-detailed incidents of robbery, arson, bombing, forgery, beating and torture."

It isn't good enough for media owners and editors to say, as some do, that individuals can turn the dial or read another story, and that anyway they only give the public what it wants. The first reply is cheap, the second abdicates responsibility.

Common sense, rather than the plodding research of academics and royal com-

What Do the Conservatives Really Stand For?

OTTAWA — There is general agreement that Canadians are in a conservative mood, but how does this translate into terms of practical politics? What are the voters really seeking in a conservative leader and in conservative policies?

One answer will be provided by delegates to the convention of the Progressive Conservative party when they choose a new leader to personify official conservatism. Will they choose a leader in the long tradition of British conservatism modified by Canadian experience, or one more in the mold of conservatism in the United States?

United Empire Loyalists fleeing from the American revolution and proclaiming their faith in British institutions and values were among the first conservatives in Canada. The architect of Confederation and the first Conservative Prime Minister, John A. Macdonald, continued to uphold British social and political ideas and to reject the American model.

It was the dream of these men and of others who followed to build a conservative society in Canada quite different from the liberal society being constructed in the United States.

The difference has been neatly illustrated by pointing out that while the Canadian constitution seeks "peace, order and good government," the U.S. constitution promises "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The true Canadian conservative honors tradition because it is based on the wisdom of experience; is respectful of established authority because without authority there can be no order and without order there can be no lasting freedom; protects property because it represents brains or breeding or both.

The conservative is not opposed to reform, but insists it should be slow and careful because the human animal needs order and custom to restrain his primitive instincts.

The conservative believes in individual liberty and enterprise, but does not hesitate to use the power of the state to curb excess, correct flagrant injustice or to defeat those who threaten stability by whatever means.

The conservative society is a peaceful, unhurried community in which every citizen knows his rights and responsibilities and is free to improve himself, as long as he remains within the rules, written and unwritten.

This means that in current terms the conservative tends to be a 'strong supporter of the monarchy and the parliamentary system; a nationalist who resents the intrusion of U.S. culture; concerned about the erosion of wealth by taxes and the erosion of moral standards by permissive law; troubled by the persistence of poverty but suspicious of the growth of the welfare state; anxious both to protect minorities and to oppose big business and big unions which challenge the state.

The traditional conservative knows problems better than answers, warns that promised cures may be worse than known diseases, proposes to proceed cautiously by trial to avoid major errors, and expects to find no Utopias in this world.

The U.S. style of conservatism is more correctly viewed as classical liberalism. In this view of the world, the best society is one in which all citizens have maximum freedom, under the minimum law necessary to maintain order to seek personal fulfillment. Out of this competition for personal advancement, it is assumed, will come the wisest, most talented and energetic people to lead a society in a constant process of reform, ensuring the greatest good of the greatest number.

Liberalism has always been the dominant ideology in the United States, although it had to be modified in the light of the excesses of capitalist development and the great depression. President Franklin D. Roosevelt and others recognized the need to exert some control over the winners in the social and economic competition — the rich and their corporations — and to provide a welfare net for the losers — the poor and unemployed.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and others followed the same course in Canada, modifying liberalism to meet the needs of the times, and as a result it has been the most successful ideology, supplanting conservatism.

The conservatives in the United States now are those who want to dismantle the work of Roosevelt and other welfare state liberals, and return to the earlier conception of a liberal society. In Canada, their equivalents are wrestling with traditional conservatives for control of the PC party.

In current terms, these new conservatives in both the United States and Canada put emphasis on reducing the power of the state — relying on harsh and summary justice to maintain order — reducing taxes and regulations to encourage the strong, while cutting welfare to force the weak to work and compete for their own eventual good.

Mixed into this so-called right-wing conservatism, there is often a strain of Populism — that is, a belief in rural enterprise, small-town values and local democracy, and opposition to Big Business, Big City corruption, and Big Government.

But U.S. conservatives, such as Barry Goldwater, Ronald Reagan and perhaps President Gerald Ford — and of course, their Canadian counterparts — would expect their society to be one of rapid growth and change, which is hardly the conventional Canadian view of a conservative community.

The candidates for the Conservative leadership are complex individuals who obviously draw inspiration and ideas from both streams of conservatism. And as they get closer to the convention, they seek to broaden their appeal by moving toward the centre of the conservative spectrum, blurring their differences.

But it is probably fair to say that among the more prominent candidates, John Fraser, Flora MacDonald, Joe Clark and James Gillies draw more from the Canadian than the U.S. tradition. They are what Gad Horowitz described as Red Tories, by which he meant they derived their conservatism from Britain rather than from American.

"What is un-American about English Canada can be summed up in one word: British," wrote Horowitz in 1965.

Among the other prominent candidates, Claude Wagner is a French Canadian and not therefore identified with the British heritage, and he has the image, rightly or wrongly, of being a sort of frontier judge, dispensing summary justice in the name of law and order. For these reasons, he is perceived to be more in the U.S. model.

Jack Horner combines a belief in rugged free enterprise with prairie populism and a distrust of eastern city slickers in a manner which would be quite familiar in the United States. But like John Diefenbaker, he also appears to value the monarchy and parliamentary traditions.

One of the factors which made Diefenbaker an unsuccessful prime minister and finally brought him down was the contradiction between his conservative and populist instincts. Horner in power might have the same problems.

Sinclair Stevens seems to be in the mold of U.S. business conservatism — that is, he is a capitalist and capitalism, demanding freedom to produce, expand, build, innovate, change, depends on traditional liberal ideology.

Paul Hellyer is perceived to be a right-winger, but he is certainly not a conservative in a traditional sense. Rather, he is a radical — an activist seeking rapid change. He demolished military tradition by unifying the armed services, whipped up an instant plan to build homes and transform cities, and has proposed permanent government controls on leading sectors of the economy.

It is probably no accident that the two Conservatives thought to be leading right-wingers, Wagner and Hellyer, are both ex-Liberals of the modern type — men of drive and ambition with a desire for the power to make changes.

It seems quite possible that at the convention they will quickly join forces, and perhaps draw from Horner and Stevens the support of delegates who have no sympathy with Red Toryism.

Similarly, one would expect to see supporters of Fraser, MacDonald, Clark and Gillies drawing together to promote their brand of conservatism.

Left out of this line-up is Brian Mulroney, who is in the happy position of having no political record and no identifiable ideology. He is said to have the skill to appeal equally to delegates in both streams, and for this reason may emerge as the winner, with a mandate in effect to interpret conservatism as he thinks fit.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau waits and watches and gently moves toward his own style of conservatism — the new society in which, under the benign eye of the state, we shall learn to co-operate instead of compete, practise the old virtues of self-discipline and restraint, and be content with what we have instead of demanding growth.

Whatever, Candidates Dodged the Issues

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

In the progressive division Brian Mulroney seems likely to be ahead on the first ballot (though trailing Claude Wagner by a substantial margin in the over-all vote), followed by Flora MacDonald, Joe Clark and John Fraser.

That sequence of Mulroney, MacDonald, Clark and Fraser is unlikely to change in subsequent ballots, though all sorts of speculative scenarios can be conjured up.

No doubt Joe Clark and John Fraser each sees the other being eliminated first, with a resulting phalanx of Alberta and B.C. votes pushing him past Flora MacDonald into the divisional championship round where delegates decide that a young lawyer from the West with a seat in Parliament is a safer leadership bet than a young lawyer from Montreal without one.

That's the stuff that dreams are made of and the reason why front-runners are seldom left to run alone.

Far likelier is a final ballot pitting progressive division winner Brian Mulroney against either Claude Wagner or whichever of the Toronto pair of Paul Hellyer and Sinclair Stevens manages to displace him.

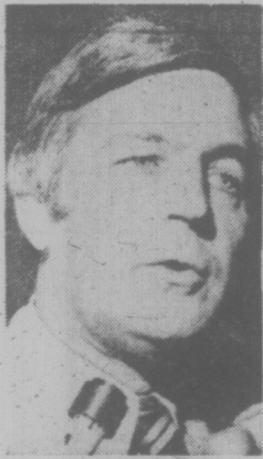

In either event, Mulroney seems likely to come out on top in the inter-league showdown. A decade of Prairie populism under the leadership of John Diefenbaker followed by almost another decade with Robert Stanfield's less flamboyant Maritime version have, if not transformed the party of Arthur Meighen and George Drew, at least shifted its centre of gravity from ultra-conservative to modestly progressive.

Whether the new leader will be able to consolidate that shift and put the party on a consistent policy footing, or whether its positions will continue to be a series of ad hoc compromise stances that paper over unresolved differences of major proportions, remains to be seen.

Given the formidable capacities for self-demolition of the present administration in Ottawa, forging such a consensus within the Progressive Conservative party may not be an essential precondition to its winning election.

It is, however, an essential precondition to its being able to govern thereafter.

WAGNER

... the beneficiary

Whatever the entrants in the Progressive Conservative leadership free-for-all have been doing these past several months, they don't appear to have been debating policy.

The several hundred speeches they delivered in the course of criss-crossing the country several times over produced not a single policy offering that could be described as novel. Nor did any issue, old or new, emerge from the process as a significant measuring stick of their respective policy views.

Quite the contrary, in their campaign pronouncements most of the candidates have conspicuously leaned in the opposite direction to whatever views they had previously been seen as having.

Thus Flora MacDonald has sought to belie her Red Tory label by extolling the virtues of the work ethic, while Claude Wagner endeavored to escape his law and order image with homilies about the need for more compassion.

But all to no avail. The policy images the candidates entered the campaign with are the ones they will carry into the convention with them next weekend.

And, accurate or not, these perceptions of their respective policy orientations will play a decisive role in determining their chances of emerging as Robert Stanfield's successor.

The reason why none of the aspirants succeeded in establishing the appearance of a middle-ground position on the PC spectrum is that there is no middle ground in the Progressive Conservative party. It is very much two parties, one progressive and the other conservative.

Even its hybrid name goes back to an abortive attempt of 35 years ago to resuscitate a moribund Conservative party by twinning it with the remnants of a declining Progressive party.

This split personality should become more and more in evidence as the successive rounds of balloting unfold.

Although the voting will start with 11 candidates' names on the initial ballot, its realpolitik will take place in terms of two divisional championships whose winners will meet in a last-ballot showdown.

Each division has four candidates vying for essentially the same votes. The remaining three candidates — MPs James Gillies, Patrick Nowlan and Howard Graffley — will all likely be eliminated on the first ballot, with most of their voters joining the progressive division.

The four candidates in the progressive division race — Brian Mulroney, Flora MacDonald, Joe Clark and John Fraser — share similarities of style, policy orientation and party experience.

As various of them are eliminated, virtually all of their support will shift to the others, ultimately consolidating behind one of them as divisional champion and standard bearer in the play-off for the PC Cup.

The four entrants in the conservative division — Claude Wagner, Paul Hellyer, Sinclair

Stevens and Jack Horner — on the other hand, have little in common beyond their right-of-centre views.

That one of them is a delegate's first choice is therefore not a virtual guarantee that one of the others will be second favorite as it is in the progressive division. Consequently some "delegate leakage" from the conservative camp into the progressive division can be expected as the balloting progresses.

How much will depend upon factors at the time.

If Jack Horner is the first to be eliminated in the conservative division, as seems likely, most of his votes should go to fellow-conservatives Paul Hellyer and Sinclair Stevens. If fellow-Albertan Joe Clark is still showing well in the progressive division race at that point, however, many of these Prairie voters may swing to him instead.

Although voting patterns will reflect the double-barrelled, two-division race, the balloting itself will not. And that will make early returns deceptive.

All indications are that Claude Wagner will head the first ballot. But he may not even be around for the last vote.

If whichever of Sinclair Stevens and Paul Hellyer outlasts the other can lay claim to most of the other's former supporters, he could have enough votes to slip past the St. Hyacinthe M.P. in the conservative division's championship round.

The Making Out Of the Presidents

Recently published material on the sex lives of Thomas Jefferson and John F. Kennedy has prompted many questions about sex and the presidency. Because of the new public demand for lubricious political disclosure, it is now vital to answer them with full candor. Here are the answers to the questions Americans most commonly ask:

Q: I have always heard that Rutherford B. Hayes wore shiny black leather underwear throughout his presidency. Is this true?

A: Anyone who knows how hot it gets in Washington in July will realize that this is nonsense. President Hayes, in fact, was an exceedingly prudish president, who blushed when he had to go into a haberdashery and ask to see some long woolen union suits.

Q: Wasn't Abraham Lincoln a foot fetishist?

A: During his career in Illinois politics, Lincoln liked to have women members of the legislature step on his corns, but he had conquered this vice by the time he became president.

Q: Who was the famous "horse-faced woman" who was brought into the White House nights during the Grant administration and led out shortly before dawn through secret underground passages?

A: President Grant's famous "horse-faced woman" was not a woman at all, but a horse cleverly got up to look like a woman. Grant devised this scheme to deceive journalists into believing that he was leading a colorful sex life, thus preventing them from discovering that the horse's saddle bags were being used to carry whisky into the White House and emptied out.

Q: Has there ever been a transvestite in the Oval Office?

A: We cannot be certain, although thousands of congressmen have visited there.

russell baker

Q: How do men as busy as presidents find so much time for adultery?

A: They don't. This is a common complaint among women summoned to the White House for adultery. They are kept waiting for hours and then squeezed in between the secretary of commerce and lunch at the desk. If war breaks out, they may be left forgotten in secret antechambers for months. The great amount of time available to vice-presidents for adultery has always been bitterly envied by presidents, and is a major source of so much of the bad feeling traditional between the two offices.

Q: Is it true that Martin Van Buren was a very poor lover?

A: President Van Buren felt the cold more acutely than most men. For this reason, he went to bed every night with two huge hot-water bottles, one on either side of him. These made it difficult to effect intimacies and led to rumors that he was a hard man to get close to. Van Buren's sex life gradually dwindled down to nothing, and he was not elected to a second term.

Q: Is it true that President Zachary Taylor liked to be spanked by older women?

A: This is a base canard, which arises from the fact that President Taylor was known as "Old Rough and Ready." Actually, Taylor abhorred spanking, as well as French postcards.

Q: Wasn't George Washington once treated for an Oedipus complex?

A: Yes, but it was accidental.

Washington had gone to have his dental plate adjusted and was inadvertently shown into a psychiatrist's office and told to lie on the couch. The doctor began by asking, "How long have you had these feelings about your mother?" Washington was so embarrassed by the hour which followed that he never went to the dentist again. This is why George Washington's false teeth still didn't fit when Gilbert Stuart painted him.

Q: How often should the ideal president have sexual relations?

A: Never. It is painful for parents to concede that their children have sexual relations and even more painful for children to concede that their parents have sexual relations, but the most painful thing of all is for the American people to concede that their presidents have sexual relations. Ideal presidents don't.

Q: What is the legal position of presidents who entertain women from the Mafia?

A: They are violating the Constitution, which demands absolute separation of church and state.

Q: I have heard that President William Henry Harrison's nickname — "Old Tippecanoe" — actually derives from a particularly flamboyant and disgusting sexual practice in which he frequently indulged. What was this?

A: The limitations of family-paper journalism preclude an answer to this question here, but it will be fully described in my forthcoming book, "Inside the White House Drawers," which will be even more incredible than "Jaws," and, I hope, twice as successful.

Q: Was President Madison a regular subscriber to Playboy?

A: No. Penthouse. In his earlier days, however, his reading of "The Playboy Philosophy" shaped the ideals he expounded in "The Federalist Papers."

'No Water, No Blankets, No Nothing'

SORRENTO, La. (UPI) — Standing on a log in the middle of a dense swamp, swatting mosquitos and warding off the cold, can't compare with a night on the town in New Orleans. But Penny and Susan McGinty handled it well.

"They took it like champs. It was very cold and the mosquitos just tore them to pieces. They were just freezing all night. They had no drinking water, no blankets, no nothing," said Joe McGinty, Penny's husband.

He and Penny, his sister Susan and their friend, pilot Hugh Moore, left Alexandria, La. Saturday for a two-hour flight in a single-engine Piper Cherokee to New Orleans.

They had planned a shopping trip and a night on the town. "sort of a get-away weekend," McGinty said.

But the plane was forced down by engine trouble in a dense swamp near Sorrento, in southeast Louisiana.

Rescuers took almost 24 hours to get the women and Moore out of the swamp, because of problems with terrain.

Penny and Sue suffered only minor scrapes and bruises; Moore was in stable condition with a head injury.

Efforts to hoist the victims by helicopter through the thick cypress trees failed, but a medic swung down to them and joined them for the wait. Sheriff's deputies and state police next tried air boats, but the brush was too thick. An amphibious duck bogged down, and a four-wheel drive marsh buggy also failed.

The four waited on a log near the plane and finally, after dawn, a "flat-track-mobile" managed to complete the rescue.

"The two ladies burst into tears. You would have just had to be there."

"After staying all night in the swamp fighting snakes and alligators — I don't mean to sound like Davy Crockett or Daniel Boone or anything like that, but it's hell," Edmonston said. "It was a rough situation."

Evel Lives Dangerously — Rides in Central Park

NEW YORK — Daredevil motorcyclist Evel Knievel took a ride Sunday which New Yorkers might consider more dangerous than jumping canyons: he pedalled through Central park on an ordinary bicycle.

Recently the park has been the scene of numerous crimes involving cyclists — including the beating to death of a male photographer by hoodlums and the theft of a bicycle belonging to John Kennedy Jr., son of the late president.

Knievel, known for an abortive attempt to jump the Snake River Canyon on a rocket-powered motorcycle and for bone-shattering leaps over long ranks of buses, jokingly called the one-mile ride Sunday his "most daring feat."

He was promoting bicycle safety.

SEAFORD, England — Paul Trevillion, 29, and 19-year-old Sadie Nine, who claim a record of 25,000 kisses in two hours, retained their title in a world kissing competition here during the weekend.

Their challengers were disqualified after 35 minutes, for cuddling.

LOS ANGELES — Musician Louis Prima, still in a coma four months after brain surgery, has been transferred to a convalescent home in New Orleans.

A spokesman for Mt. Sinai Hospital, where Prima underwent surgery in October, did not identify the institution in New Orleans and gave no reason for the move.

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — James Butler's aerial sign company didn't receive any takers for skywriting "I Love You" messages for Valentine's Day but got one request which didn't exactly fit in with the spirit of the day.

A woman who did not give her name handed Butler $135 Saturday to have one of his planes tow a five-foot-high sign over the Miami area for 90 minutes.

The sign read: "I love you John. Get a divorce."

Butler said he accepted the order with reluctance.

"A lot of women with husbands named John could have gotten pretty upset," he said.

LOS ANGELES — Playgirl Magazine is cleaning up its pages — but not too much. The nude men will still be there.

The magazine, a female counterpart to Playboy, said it is giving up $1 million in advertising revenue by eliminating erotic advertising beginning with the June issue.

"Our efforts to produce a magazine with an editorial content of the highest quality has been an ongoing process over the past year," said Ira Ritter, vice president and director of advertising.

"We feel it would be a contradiction in terms to retain any advertising that could be offensive or even in-questionable taste. . . . further, we do not want to imply our endorsement of erotic products."

OTTAWA — Raquel Welch, the reigning American sex symbol, will make her Canadian show tour debut at the National Arts Centre here March 9, it was announced Sunday. Contract terms were agreed to Saturday night for her to perform here twice with her 15-member troupe before a scheduled Toronto appearance. They will be the only Canadian appearances of her tour.

FLORIDA SUN FOR MARGARET

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Margaret Trudeau, wife of the Canadian prime minister, plans to spend most of the week visiting with friends from Ottawa who are in Miami for the winter, a spokesman said Sunday.

Mrs. Trudeau declined to talk to reporters when she arrived late Saturday. The spokesman declined to say where Mrs. Trudeau was staying and whom she was visiting.

"It's a private visit and I want to make sure it stays private," Trudeau's press secretary said by telephone Sunday from Ottawa.

An aide travelling Sunday in British Columbia with Trudeau said the prime minister did not know Mrs. Trudeau was planning a trip. But the press secretary said the Florida trip has been planned "at least a fortnight."

Mrs. Trudeau visited with friends Friday in Toronto before catching a flight to New York en route to Miami. The only thing she declared while clearing customs in Toronto was a box of Cuban cigars.

She was presented cigars by Cuban Premier Fidel Castro during a visit to the island country with her husband last month.

JUDGE RESERVES HFC DECISION

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice H. E. Huchison has reserved decision in a British Columbia supreme court action against Household Finance Corp.

The trade practices branch of the federal Consumer and Corporate Affairs Department brought the action and is seeking a permanent injunction restraining the finance company from taking assignments of sale contracts from retail stores and with holding that knowledge of the con-

The department seeks a court declaration that the practice, which it says occurred between July 6 and Dec. 31, 1974, was deceptive.

W. J. Wallace, acting for the department, told the court HFC entered into a master sales finance plan and took assignments of contracts from retailers in the interior of the province and, on Vancouver Island.

Lack of Funds May Close Notre Dame

NELSON (CP) — Dr. Val George, acting president of Notre Dame University, told faculty and students that the institution may close at the end of the current academic year.

He said the provincial government has failed to guarantee enough money to meet Notre Dame's operating budget.

But Walter Armstrong, chairman of the universities council of B.C., said the government has not given Notre Dame a flat no. It simply hasn't said yes. But he confirmed that he had advised Notre Dame that the council at present has no money for it and has not asked the government for any additional money.

VANCOUVER — Some B.C. labor leaders don't appear anxious to support a call by the Confederation of Canadian Unions for a country-wide strike to force the federal government to abandon its program of selected wage and price controls.

Syd Thompson, president of the Vancouver and District Labor Council, said Sunday that ultimately organized labor will get a bellyful of the wage controls and eventually there will be eruptions. But right now, he said, there is no chance of a general strike developing, at least in B.C.

VANCOUVER — A brief from the Building Owners and Managers Association of Vancouver has urged a reorganization of property tax structures, including the removal of school taxes from their buildings. The group, whose members own or administer more than 25 million square feet of commercial and office space in British Columbia, valued at some $1 billion, presented a brief to the provincial commission on property tax assessment and taxation. The association was critical of suggestions that property taxes be based on land values alone, saying land value on its own did not accurately reflect the owner's ability to pay taxes. The brief recommended all property be assessed at full market value, with the value determined by averaging market sale prices

CHILLIWACK (CP) — A total of 82 pieces of surplus government equipment was auctioned off in three hours Saturday at the Canadian Forces Base here. Claudette Nadeau, president of the corporation, said in an interview it won't be known for a week how much the sale realized but "it brought us a very good amount."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Peter Garnet Hogg, 18, no fixed address, pleaded guilty in provincial court Saturday to two charges of possession of marijuana Feb. 6 and failure to appear in court Feb. 13.

Hogg was arrested when he did not show up in court Friday.

Judge Douglas Campbell remanded him to Feb. 20 for pre-sentence report after the youth said he had no income and was living temporarily at the Salvation Army.

The only sentence Hogg could comply with was jail, said the judge, who added he could not sentence him fairly without a report.

BCR Settlement Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teamsters union spokesman Ed Zimmerman said Sunday more than half the approximately 270 teamsters employed by British Columbia Railway have voted to reject an industrial inquiry commissioner's recommendations.

He said about 60 teamsters at Prince George Sunday voted 99 per cent in favor of rejecting the report of industrial inquiry commissioner Mr. Justice Munroe, who had recommended a $1.90-an-hour wage increase during a two-year agreement, plus a cost-of-living increase.

Zimmerman said the Prince George members also voted 95 per cent to take strike action.

In North Vancouver Saturday, almost 90 teamsters voted unanimously against the terms of the report and 95 per cent in favor of striking.

B.C. Rail employed 4 teamsters were voting today at Squamish, Dawson Creek and Fort St. John.

Zimmerman said the union would meet with railway officials Tuesday.

He said the provincial government owned railway would have to add 30 cents to the $1.90 an hour recommended by Mr. Justice Munroe because teamsters are determined not to accept less than B.C. Rail engineers, who earlier won a two-year agreement providing a 28-per-cent increase.

The previous contract expired in July, 1975. Mr. Justice Munroe's recommendations for an increase of $1.90 an hour also cover the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks, and the International Union of Operating Engineers.

Those three unions have not yet commented on the report.

Base rates were unavailable.

For the fifth union without a contract at BCR, the United Transportation Union, Mr. Justice Munroe recommended retroactive pay of 14 per cent of total earnings from Aug. 1, 1975, to Feb. 15, 1976. Conductors would get a basic hourly rate of $8.19, increasing Aug. 1 to $8.90. UTU members previously were paid on a mileage basis.

The UTU has refused to take the recommendations to its membership.

Vigilantes Gun Looters

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (UPI) — The government today appealed to armed vigilante squads to stop executing looters found sacking homes damaged in the Feb. 4 earthquake.

According to unofficial reports, more than 200 looters have been killed by the police, vigilante squads and the army.

The vigilante squads, armed with shotguns, handguns and knives, were formed to patrol the city's residential districts, especially those bordering slum areas that harbor known criminals.

The government, which also reported the death toll from the quake has reached 22,088, said in radio broadcasts the looters should be turned over to the army.

However, the army itself was said to be shooting some looters in its custody.

Although the government has not confirmed the executions, photographs of several bullet-riddled corpses have been published by newspapers.

One vigilante told newsmen his and other groups have been shooting all captured looters. Others say the squads are not only killing looters, but any known criminal they encounter on patrol.

The thieves have been tempted by thousands of abandoned homes whose owners prefer to stay in their cars or in tents due to continued tremors.

Since the Feb. 4 quake and follow-up tremor two days later, there have been more than 800 aftershocks.

Sporadic tremors jarred several sections of the country Sunday and the government warned of flooding from rivers and streams blocked by tons of rock and soil.

In an interview with the newspaper El Tiempo, president Kjell Laugerud Garcia was asked how many years it will take to get Guatemala "more or less" back on its feet.

"We are going to try to do it as fast as possible," he said. "But at this moment, it would be foolhardy even to make a tentative guess."

Life in the capital has begun returning to normal.

SKI STAR KILLED IN SLIDE

LA MONGIE, France (UPI)

Searchers today found the body of a sixth skier killed in an avalanche at this Pyrenees resort, raising to 11 the number of snowslide deaths in France Sunday. One of the victims was former French ski champion Jean-Pierre Augert.

The latest victim, a young woman, was not immediately identified.

Six persons were killed in the avalanche at La Mongie and three others were missing. Five other persons, including Augert, were killed in five different avalanches in the French Alps.

Iran Cuts Crude Oil Price

LONDON (UPI) — Iran, the second largest oil producer in the Middle East, has reduced the price of its heavy crude oil by 9.5 cents a barrel to $11.40 in a bid to recover lost sales, London newspapers reported today.

The new price, fixed after a week of talks between the National Iranian Oil Co. and a consortium of major American and British oil companies, comes into operation immediately, the London Times reported.

The price cut was expected to be officially announced in the United States by the National Oil Company, the Financial Times said.

But the Iranian oil at the new price still costs 10 cents more per barrel than Kuwaiti crude oil, reduced in price by 17 cents a barrel last October, and seven cents more than similar grades of Saudi Arabian oil.

Falling oil revenue as a result on an 11.2 per cent slump in Iran's crude oil exports has contributed to a possible $2.4 billion deficit in Iran's budget for the financial year beginning March 21, oil industry sources said.

MOVIE BECOMES THE REAL THING

MONTREAL (CP) — Pietro Sciarra, 60, who testified three months ago at the Quebec police commission inquiry into organized crime, was shot and killed Saturday as he left a screening of the Italian version of The Godfather.

Police said Sciarra was shot in the head by a man who approached him Saturday night as he left the Riviera Cinema in the city's north end. Sciarra's wife, Trissa, was slightly injured in the shooting, but was later released from hospital.

A police spokesman said the unidentified gunman escaped in a waiting van driven by an accomplice.

Sciarra, a Sicilian deported from Canada in 1966 and again in 1970, was condemned to 15 months imprisonment for illegal entry into the country on his third visit. He was freed pending appeal.

During his testimony before the commission inquiry, Sciarra described himself as a friend of the godfather of the Montreal underworld.

He also testified he did not know the meaning of the word Mafia.

An Italian police witness told the inquiry Sciarra was twice convicted under Italy's anti-Mafia laws and exiled from his native village as a recognized mafioso.

Douglas Raps Fine to Irving

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Tommy Douglas, former NDP national leader, said Saturday that a ruling by the federal Anti-Inflation Board, in which Irving Pulp and Paper Ltd. of New Brunswick was fined $125,000, "is tinged with a certain color of vengeance."

The MF for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands told Northern Ontario regional NDP council delegates that not only is the company being fined, it must also turn over the government $75,000 it is holding in trust for its workers.

This amount is the difference between the 14-per-cent wage increase the Anti-Inflation Board has ordered the company to pay its workers and the 23.8 per cent the company and workers had agreed to.

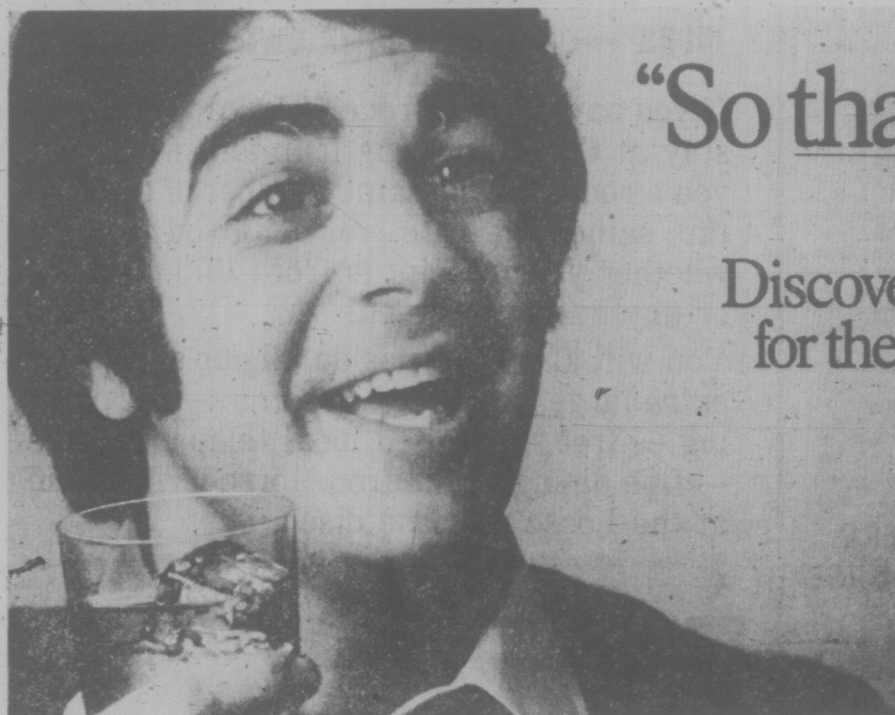

Douglas said the only course left to the company is through an appeal tribunal which the government did not set up until Friday.

"It smacks to me of totalitarianism."

He promised that the NDP will battle along with organized labor "to have what is left of democracy in this country."

Calling the Anti-Inflation Act class legislation, he said it is destroying collective bargaining and is "tearing up the British North America Act."

"So that's Triple Crown!"

CAR PLUNGE BELOW FALLS KILLS TWO

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (UPI) — Two Canadian men died Sunday when a car plunged 200 feet into the gorge below thundering Niagara Falls.

Niagara regional police said the car was apparently travelling at a high rate of speed when it went out of control and over a snowbank and a three-foot retaining wall into the Niagara River gorge.

Police found skidmarks Sunday morning, several hours after the mishap. Rescuers lowered into the gorge found the bodies of Gerhard Schulz, in his early 40s, and Henry Statz, 43, both of Niagara Falls.

Both men had been thrown from the vehicle during the accident, police said.

Let's Trade the 'Roman Chariot'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If Dennis Pearce had his way, we'd all be writing and reading shorthand symbols instead of a weird collection of clumsy letters which have remained substantially unchanged for thousands of years.

Then we could turn out better students (sparing them many of the agonies they now endure in learning), simplify court, parliamentary and business procedures, do away with a lot of costly office equipment, reduce the drain on precious resources which now supply thousands of miles of newsprint to feed the world's presses.

As Pearce warns to his radical theme he opens up an almost limitless perspective of possibilities and ramifications, and even extreme skeptics must find themselves acknowledging the basic common sense of it all.

A shorthand expert himself, he's the chief regional court reporter, with offices in the Law Courts building on Blanshard — Pearce travels at the speed of sound. That is, he can get the words down on paper no matter how fast you speak: 120 words per minute, 180, 220.

To the ordinary person sweating and struggling to achieve even a modest 30 words per minute in long-hand, his smoothly-gliding hand forming a steady flow of strange-looking symbols seems to possess magical qualities.

But he insists there's no mystique involved.

Shorthand is not only fast, he says, it's simple, efficient and vastly superior to the cumbersome written language as we know it, a nightmare of unwieldy letter shapes, spelling irregularities, quirks of pronunciation and other oddities.

And its universal adoption would revolutionize communication, touching virtually every facet of our lives.

Pearce says the effect on education alone would be profound. Elementary school students would have no fear of making spelling errors. Older students at high school and university, confident of their note-taking ability, would better absorb what was actually being said by their teachers and lecturers.

Bosses wouldn't need to dictate letters to secretaries because they could quickly write their own, rather bosses who would be able to read their shorthand.

There would be little or no time lag in obtaining trans-

'Magnetic impulses on mylar tape do little for the human mind. Electro-chemical impulses from the brain to the pen exercise the mind, quicken the thought, lengthen the memory, broaden the knowledge, improve the judgment, yes, give to the lawyer and judge those very attributes to which he aspires.'

If We All Learned Shorthand,
We'd Save Precious Resources—Expert

scripts of court proceedings. The official court reporter would have a clerk of the court sitting at his elbow. As soon as one page of notes was completed it would be whisked off to a copying machine and — hey presto — instant transcripts for judges and lawyers.

But in conservation of energy and natural resources, the effects of widespread use of shorthand would be even more dramatic.

Pearce points out that our present written language, with its root in Egyptian, Hebrew, Greek and Roman symbols, is based on a 26-letter alphabet which completely ignores Euclid's theorem that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line.

Just look at letters like Q, K, G and B and you'll see what he means.

By contrast, consider the simple beauty of the shorthand system which the Pitmans introduced to the world about 140 years ago.

The system is phonetic, with words written according to their sounds. Consonants are represented by simple geometrical forms, straight lines and shallow curves; vowels by dots and dashes.

Shortened forms, grammatical and advanced phrasing — allowing the writer to incorporate common phrases several words long in a single outline — further refine the art. And the result is that 300 shorthand words can be written in the same space that would be required to write a mere 30 words of longhand script.

Pearce says the space saving even in writing the 10 most commonly used words in the English language (the, of, and, to, a, in, that, was, it), accounting for 25 per cent of everything we hear, see, read and write, would be enormous.

Less newsprint required for newspapers, less energy to run the presses, fewer trees to be felled — and he's launched into another reverie of the benefits awaiting us if only we became a race of Pitmen.

When we should all be travelling at the speed of sound, "we are still on the Roman chariot," Pearce says.

And he pins the blame squarely on "a German fellow named Gutenberg who improved the Chinese invention of printing and froze the Roman alphabet so hard that we still have it."

However, he's still at a loss to understand why, in this technological age, more attention hasn't been paid to improving the way we com-communicate through the written word.

"Shorthand has been looked upon as gimmickry, I think largely because it has been a tool of the stenographer," he said.

"The male boss has always had a superior attitude towards the female stenographer."

But he considers his craft "as much an art and a science as anything else we can think of. It's a means of training and liberating the mind."

And he leaves this thought with the chariot riders: "The average student can learn to write shorthand at 120 words per minute (allowing him to keep up with more than 90 per cent of all the words that are likely to be thrown at him) through one hour's study per day for a year."

Communication Boost For Saanich in April

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Communications in Saanich will receive a boost April 1.

That's when the municipality officially takes over B.C. Tel. old transmitter site in Mount Douglas Park.

The takeover will not only provide better service for Saanich taxpayers. It will also save money.

Assistant general superintendent Les Dickson says the move was first contemplated in 1974.

"In late 1974 we looked at our communications system (used by the public works, police and fire departments) and found it was becoming inadequate."

Dickson said there were several "blind spots" in the 11-square-mile municipality, caused by hills and other obstacles because of the restrictive height of the present transmitter site near the Wesley reservoir on Lochside.

Dickson said inadequate equipment compounded the problem.

Mayor Ed Lum began negotiations with the Victoria-Saanich Mount Douglas Park Committee and B.C. Tel. early in 1975 when it was learned the telephone company intended to move from the park to a site at Smith's Hill near Spencer Castle.

The move has been made. An agreement has been reached with B.C. Tel. that the equipment left behind at the park, including a small building with an automatic diesel generator (in case of power failures), be handed over to Saanich for $1.

Saanich has taken over B.C. Tel.'s lease for the site. The municipality received the key to the building on Wednesday. Next Thursday, Bell and Shennell Electronics Ltd. will begin assembling the electronic equipment at the new station.

Dickson said 16 individual pages, at a cost of $20 each, have been bought, and issued to the public works, police and fire departments.

"These are normally rented from B.C. Tel. at about $27 a month, plus a hefty installation cost," Dickson said.

He explained how these will cut down labor costs for the municipality.

"The public works department, as an example, normally has a standby crew of about four during the hours the municipal hall is not in operation."

With the use of a pager, now only one man will be required and he will not be forced to stand by at home during his duty but be free to go downtown or do other things, always being available through his pager.

Lum also pointed out that, by using the pagers, time will not be lost when work units completing work in one area are needed in another.

Home Was a Logging Country Bunkhouse

BACK WHEN FELLEEM and Yarden were letting daylight into the woods, my habitation for part of each year was a logging camp bunkhouse. It was one of a row of quaint rectangular frame structures that fronted on a boardwalk pocked by the boot-calls of logger generations.

Its walls were unlined, its windows curtainless. The floor was of bare planks, also calk-cheved.

Spotted five to a side and two across each end of its interior were narrow steel cots with flat springs. The cots were topped by donkey's breakfast mattresses cased in striped ticking, grey blankets, and sheets which the camp bedmaker changed twice a week.

By way of frills, the company provided a wooden table and an oilburn heater with stovepipe chimney. In the lee of the heater was a wood-box stacked with 'yard-long' fir chunks.

Ugly? I suppose so. Stark and cheerless? Perhaps. But the bunkhouse was the nearest approach to a home that many a Tame Ape of the railway show era could claim, and there were times when I remembered it with yearning.

Within the larger community of a logging camp, it was the place where a man with a day's work behind him could take his ease. The area occupied by his bed and surrounding it was his own preserve.

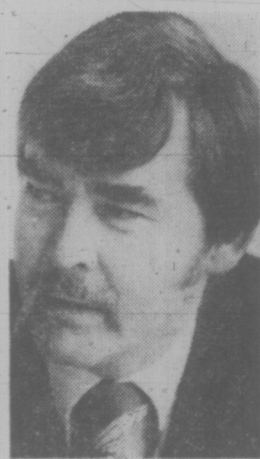

His pack of work gear hung from the wall. The scuffed suitcase that held his town-going clothes was snuggled under his cot. A butter box nailed to a stud made a shelf for his lesser effects — his shaving tackle, his bar of soap, perhaps the book of commissary tickets from which he settled for such minor and grudging in-camp purchases as finecut tobacco or new racing gloves.

The logger, as I knew him was stringently honest. Theft in camp was virtually unknown. I can still remember the shock and anger that swept a crew when we found that a pilferer had raided a couple of bunkhouses.

But the thief wasn't a logger. Just a drifter from the city, who went his way with Skyline Rex's wallet in his pocket, Slim's watch on his wrist and my leather jacket on his back.

Admittedly, the bunkhouse was no palace. But for the hours we spent under its roof, it offered more than shelter. On a grey day with the rain sluicing down and quitting-time still hours distant, it became a longed-for haven. It meant dry clothes. In the however, motorists with an accident this month should report it prior to March 1, he said.

The ICBC office closes at 6 p.m. but if there is a line-up there is no point in arriving after 5:30 p.m., he said. The office will be closing at 6 p.m.

Victoria body shops report a two-week waiting period is required because of the rush of business. Some of it is the continuing backlog from the strike but other motorists are rushing in, fearing they will lose the right to the $50 deductible clause if the work isn't done before March.

The rush is particularly acute for windshield work. Once a claim has been established, there is no need to get the repairs done by Feb. 29 although the work should not be delayed for too long, an ICBC official said.

OFFICES OPEN ON SATURDAYS

Motor-vehicle branch and government agents offices will be open the last two Saturdays in February to sell Autoplan policies and 1976 licences to British Columbia drivers.

A spokesman from the department of transport and communications said today that branch offices in Victoria, the Lower Mainland, Kamloops and Trail will be open Feb. 21 and 28 from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. and government agents' offices in smaller communities will be open the same days from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Private insurance offices which provide government automobile insurance will also be open on those days, he said.

Canadian First at UVic?

University of Victoria faculty is considering a preferential hiring system which would ensure Canadians are hired first "in appropriate circumstances."

Formulated by the president's executive council, a draft policy is being circulated among faculties, departments and schools. The draft also calls for a guarantee that positions be thoroughly advertised throughout Canada.

Operating clauses in the policy proposals:

"If a competition for a position produces applicants who meet all the academic criteria and if "one or more such applicant is a Canadian applicant, then the appointment will be offered to the best qualified Canadian applicant."

"If appropriate circumstances when it would mean an outstanding or extraordinary benefit to the university, the appointment may be offered to a non-Canadian."

The proposal is being circulated for faculty feedback and defines a Canadian applicant as a "Canadian citizen or one who has had extensive academic training or experience in Canada."

UVic Institutional Analysis department reports in 1974-75 63 per cent of 389 full-time faculty were Canadian; 22 per cent American, 11 per cent from the United Kingdom, three per cent from other countries, one per cent unknown. Figures are based on current citizenship status not country of origin.

In years previous, the spokesman said, the Canadian percentage was "significantly lower."

Housing Paradox at Housing Conference

SOMETHING TO SLEEP ON

By CARMEL MacDOUGALL
VANCOUVER (CP) — No one knows how many will come, what exactly they will discuss or where they all will sleep.

But Habitat, the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, is moving ponderously and with little local understanding towards its May 31 opening here.

Organizers say the conference, which is to discuss housing and its problems on a world-scale with participation from 133 countries, will be the largest UN-sponsored conference ever held. But not everyone thinks Vancouver is ready for it.

City council has expressed concern about security and the cost of providing it.

Organizers have said that although housing will be the overriding conference theme, an agenda hasn't been decided upon and they don't know precisely what will be discussed.

It might also be that delegates to a housing conference will have trouble finding shelter for themselves. Organizers say that a parallel conference for non-government participants, the Habitat Forum, could draw more than 10,000. There's no compulsory pre-registration, so nobody knows how many are coming, but there is only accommodation for about 3,500.

Al Clapp, one of the Forum organizers, thinks housing is going to be a problem and the city had better get to work on it.

The city doesn't see it that way.

"It's our feeling that not much is being done by way of accommodation," said Erni Fladel, a senior city planner, in charge of the city's contribution to the conference.

"I've never heard of a group deciding to have a convention in somebody's city who have decided you've got to put up all the facilities for them. I think they decided they're going to be here, they've got to come up with the bucks to take care of all the people they're inviting."

Deputy Police Chief A. E. Oliver has said, in a confidential letter to the city planning department, that a tent city will not be allowed on the Forum site, the former Jericho armed forces base.

"A recent conversation with Habitat host officials discloses that sufficient accommodation has not been located and planners are again thinking in terms of a 'tent city,' says the letter.

With the conference about four months off, most of the people planning it still are based in Ottawa or New York.

But James MacNeill, commissioner-general in charge of Canada's Habitat secretariat said during a visit to Vancouver recently that there are about 25 people in the local office and preparations for the world conference are going well.

Mr. MacNeill, a 48-year-old former federal urban affairs department deputy minister, has a Vancouver staff with a considerable job in supplying the physical and technical facilities needed for the conference. There will be about 2,000 invited delegates, including heads of state and ministers. About 1,500 media representatives are expected and an unknown number of what Mr. MacNeill called support staff.

The conference is the first sponsored by the UN that is not being held in a national capital. It is also the first expected to make extensive use of audiovisual technology.

Closed-circuit television will monitor all official plenary sessions, as well as sessions at the Forum.

The Habitat conference is expected to cost Canada about $15 million, or more than $1 million for each of the 12 days it will last. The UN is expected to contribute $6 million and delegates will pay their own way here.

Once they arrive, the federal government will pay their hotel costs. The budget for security alone is estimated at $2 million.

Security and its cost was the reason given by city council last October when it voted to ask Ottawa to cancel the conference. Mayor Art Phillips said the city had no budget to cover the costs and Ottawa had not said it would pay.

The incident came after the UN passed its resolution saying Zionism is a form of racism. It was followed by statements from the Palestine Liberation Organization, saying it would send delegates, not terrorists, to Habitat.

Barney Danson, minister for external affairs, perhaps mindful of having the incident-free UN-sponsored Crime Convention Congress moved to Geneva from Toronto last year, refused to move

Blinding Genius Shines At UBC

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Scientists at the University of British Columbia have come up with an invention that's not just brilliant, it's positively blinding.

It's the world's brightest arc lamp for commercial use.

It's brighter than the sun and twice as hot as the 6,000-degree Celsius surface temperature of the sun.

In concentrated form, its beam is powerful enough to melt steel or any other hard substance — something like a laser.

"But its primary use will be in wide-area illumination," says the head of the four-man design team, Dr. David Camm, 32, formerly of Toronto.

"It will revolutionize lighting in this field and will be of special use to Canada for work and search-and-rescue operations during long Arctic nights."

"If an oil spill occurs in the north, for example, authorities can't wait weeks or months for daylight before they begin a cleanup. They have to get moving straight away."

The lamp has an intensity of 125,000 watts, about six times more powerful than the brightest lights now in known use — 20,000-watt units are used to illuminate the launchpad for night blasts at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Camm said only 12 of the lamps could light a football stadium brightly enough for color TV coverage of the play. Stadiums now use anywhere from 1,250 to 4,000 lamps, depending on intensity.

One of the new lamps also could throw a light five miles long and 1,000 feet wide on a clear night. It could light up the ground for two miles around a search aircraft.

The secret of the design lies in enveloping the six-inch element in a circulating stream of inert gas — "in effect, a miniature tornado" — which, oddly enough, stabilizes the system against quirky behavior and prevents damage to the outer shell.

"If we focused the lamp on one square meter, about 10 square feet, the illumination would be 3,000 times greater than the brightness of average Vancouver winter sunlight on the same area," Camm said.

"We could even develop a million-watt lamp, so strong that only one would be needed for a football field."

"But then there would be trouble with shadows. And, besides, what would happen if it burned out in the middle of a game?"

Special safeguards had to be used in laboratory tests because of the 12,000-degree heat generated by the lamp.

"That's equivalent to 70-room heaters going full blast at the same time so we had to be careful we didn't cook anybody," Camm said. "We got round the problem by using water in an elaborate heat-transfer system to give everyone the best possible protection."

Members of the design team have patented part of the system and formed a Vancouver company, Vortex Industries Ltd., to produce and market the lamp to Canadian and foreign buyers. It is expected to cost from $50,000 to $80,000 and be available for "off-the-shelf" purchase in two years.

$500 To Vic High Graduate

An 18-year-old Victoria High graduate has been awarded a $500 scholarship by the B.C. Teachers' Federation in recognition of his all-round performance in high school.

John Fawcett, 57 Wellington Ave., now a first-year science student at the University of Victoria, was awarded the scholarship at the meeting of the BCTF representative assembly in Vancouver Jan. 30.

The scholarship is offered annually to the son or daughter of any members of the federation, in honor of the late Harry Charlesworth, first general secretary of the BCTF.

John is the son of James Fawcett, a teacher at Esquimalt senior secondary.

He graduated from Vic High with an excellent academic record, won a senior athletic award for participation in sports and won the Leader Cup as the Grade 12 student who contributed most to the school during his final year.

Vikings Meet Leaders In Playoff-Berth Bid

University of Victoria Vikings appear to have a better chance of finishing the Canada West University Athletic Association women's basketball league season with a perfect record than the UVic Vikings have of finishing with a berth in the men's league playoffs.

Coach Mike Gallo of Vikings will be aiming for a 20-0 season record with his charges visit University of Calgary Dinnies next weekend for their final two regular schedule games of the season. The Dinnies have won only three of 18 league games.

Victoria Home Lumber handed Vikings, who have clinched the league title, their only loss of the season during an international exhibition tournament in Vancouver. Meanwhile, Vikings also visit Calgary for their final two games against Dinosours, who are top-ranked in Canada and have clinched the men's league title.

Vikings are deadlocked with University of British Columbia Thunderbirds for second place and the final playoff berth. Thunderbirds finish off with two games against third-place Lethbridge.

Both Vikings and Vikings wound up their home schedule Saturday with victories over the University of Alberta.

Vikings tripped the second-place Pandas 64-40 while Vikings edged the Golden Bears, 66-63.

The victories completed weekend sweeps for both

UVic clubs. Vikings clinched the title by beating Pandas 74-61 Friday night while Vikings topped Golden Bears, 65-55.

Pandas had a bad shooting night Saturday and didn't provide many problems for Vikings, who substituted freely throughout the game.

Lorna McHattie led Vikings with 12 points as 11 of the players made the score sheet. Miss McHattie and Laury Grimston, both completing their fifth and final season with Vikings, were honored during a special half time ceremony.

In other women's league games, Lethbridge Pronghorns tripped Dinnies 59-54 and Saskatchewan Huskies tripped UBC Thunderettes, 50-44.

Lee Edmondson set the pace for Vikings with 19 points and pulled in seven rebounds while Loren Dakin was good on four of eight field goal tries and hit seven of nine free throws to finish with a 15-point night. Doug Mosher contributed 12 points to the UVic cause.

In other men's action, Thunderbirds topped Saskatchewan Huskies 84-68 and Dinosours tripped Lethbridge Pronghorns, 90-73.

CEDAR HILL ON TOP

Cedar Hill emerged with all of the silverware during the 49th annual Greater Victoria junior high school swimming championships Saturday at Crystal Pool.

Cedar Hill captured the Dickinson and Dunn Trophy as the overall aggregate winner with 398 points, collected the Archie McKinnon Trophy for topping the novice points competition with 156 points, won the Panday Trophy for a victory in the 200-metre girls' freestyle relay and made off with the Royal Canadian Legion Trophy for a win in the corresponding boys' relay.

Following behind Cedar Hill in the overall standings were Arbustus (226), Lansdowne (213), Royal Oak-Claremont (196), Oak Bay (181), Duns-muir (180), Central (117), Highrock (91), Shoreline (76), Reynolds (64), S. J. Willis (56), Colquhoun (34), Norfolk House (24), Unattached (17) and Glenlyon (9).

Lansdowne finished second in novice points, an event for swimmers with no previous training, with 119. Central and Shoreline tied for third with 58 each, Reynolds followed with 32 and Oak Bay trailed with 50.

A total of 600 swimmers entered the meet.

Colonials in Tie With Rebel Club

Rebels II and Colonials battled to a 1-1 deadlock Sunday in one of three matches which ended the first half of the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association schedule.

In other matches, Castaways tripped UVic Vikings 4-2 and Rebels blanked Kangonis, 4-0. Oak Bay II picked up a win by default over Oak Bay I and the two teams will amalgamate in the second half of the schedule.

Mike Walski scored for Colonials and "Hawk" Watt countered for Rebels II in a match that settled the dividing line for splitting the league into an upper and a lower division during the second half of the season. Rebels II were promoted to the first division on the basis of a better record in games between the teams.

David Auld led Castaways with two goals and singles were fired by Rick Sutton and Alistair Glegg. Roland Ek and Bill Melver scored for Vikings.

Rick Elson (2), Dean Clark and Craig Wilson scored for Rebels.

TRAIL (CP) — The British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association has ruled that Trail Smoke Eaters' goaltender Ty Langton will remain suspended until mid-night Feb. 26.

The ruling is the result of an appeal hearing requested by both Langton and the Smoke Eaters after BCAHA president Frank Spring of Cranbrook suspended the hockey player for the remainder of the season, including the playoffs.

The netminder was assessed a match penalty for coming into contact with a referee in Cranbrook Jan. 17. Trail coach Norm Dennis said "it's a decision we can live with."

It's Time to Heed Those Hot Bruins

By The Canadian Press

It's about time Montreal Canadiens and Philadelphia Flyers started paying more attention to Boston Bruins.

While the Flyers and Canadiens were touting Sunday's game between the two clubs as one of the crucial tests of this National Hockey League season, the Bruins were sneaking up on them.

In fact, the Flyers-2-1 victory over Montreal didn't just trim the Canadiens lead in the overall standing. It kept Philadelphia in second place overall.

The Bruins, one of the hottest teams in the league, stayed on the Flyers heels by beating Chicago Black Hawks 4-1.

The win left Boston one point behind Philadelphia and eight behind Montreal in the overall standings. The top team is assured of the home-ice advantage in every playoff round.

In Sunday's other NHL games, California Golden Seals defeated Minnesota North Stars 7-3, New York Rangers trimmed Kansas City Scouts 5-1, New York Islanders downed Buffalo Sabres 3-1, Washington Capitals surprised Detroit Red Wings 8-5 and Pittsburgh Penguins snapped Los Angeles Kings 6-4.

On Saturday, Los Angeles tied Montreal 2-2, Pittsburgh and the Islanders drew 4-4, St. Louis Blues stopped Atlanta Flames 6-3, Detroit edged Minnesota 3-2, Vancouver Canucks shaded Toronto

Maple Leafs 5-4 and Chicago edged Kansas City 5-4.

A turning point in the Bruins' success was the Phil Esposito trade with New York Rangers that brought them Jean Ratelle and Brad Park.

Ratelle was the big factor in Sunday's victory. He scored Boston's first three goals against former Ranger teammate Gilles Villeneuve.

Arda a Winner

MANILA (AP) — Ben Arda of the Philippines shot a four-under-par 68 Sunday to win the $20,000 Marcos Golf Invitational Masters golf tournament with an 11-under-par 277, six strokes ahead of South Korean Kim Seung-Hack.

The final period was only 14 seconds old when Philadelphia's Bill Barber stole the puck, circled the net from right to left and shot it past Dryden before he could cover the angle.

Jacques Lemaire had given Montreal a 1-0 lead in the first period but Larry Goodenough tied the score in the first minute of the middle period with a 35-foot shot past Dryden, who had just made two difficult saves on Philadelphia captain Bobby Clarke.

Left winger Jim Moxey scored three times to help the Seals win at Bloomington, Minn., for the first time since the 1969-70 season.

Esposito scored two goals and assisted on a third against Kansas City. The points moved him into fifth place in the all-time NHL scoring list with 1,231 points.

The Islanders Ed Westfall won a faceoff with Buffalo's Don Luce in the third period and passed off to an uncovered Andre St. Laurent, who scored New York's winning goal from 20 feet out.

Jean Lemieux and Gerry Meehan scored two goals each to help the Capitals to their sixth win of the season.

Pittsburgh moved to within eight points of the second-place Kings in the Norris Division standings by beating Los Angeles. The Penguins have two games in hand.

Snead Hangs On

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "That," said J. C. Snead, "was the longest 24 hours I've ever spent."

"I played that round all night long, I thought I'd never get to sleep. Then when I woke up, I thought I'd already won the golf tournament."

"It was kind of a disappointment when I realized I had to go out and play it again."

And the big nephew of Sam

Snead, still carrying a wilted, four-leaf clover he found in Thursday's first round, almost let it get away. He watched a commanding five-shot lead all but disappear in the face of a charge by veteran Don Bies in Sunday's final round of the Andy Williams-San Diego open golf tournament.

"I was just trying to hang on," Snead said. "I didn't think I was choking, but I guess I did, because I hit some shots out there I wouldn't normally hit."

Snead, who led or shared the lead through all 72 holes, had to birdie the final hole to win the tournament for the second consecutive year with a final round of par 72 on the 7,047-yard South course at the Torrey Pines Country Club and a 272 total, 16 under par.

Bies, who started the final day six shots back, closed to within one with a last-round 67 and 273.

Mike Morley, Australian Bruce Crampton and 46-year-old Don January were next at 275. Morley had a 69, Crampton 68 and January 70. Bud Allin was alone at 276 after a closing 68.

Miller Barber, seeking to become only the 10th man to reach $1 million in career winnings, fell just $389 short after his 72 had left him in a tie for 15th place at 279.

J. C. SNEAD . . . Tongue-hanging triumph

A Homespun Windup

INNSBRUCK (CP) — Children peled athletes with flowers and fireworks burst over this Tyrolean city Sunday as happy Austrians said goodbye to the 12th Winter Olympic Games in their own homespun way.

Twelve days of fun and frolic for more than a million visitors ended the way they began with the host country winning the gold medal.

As everyone expected, Russia and East Germany won half the 90-odd medals in their one-two finish in the medals and points tables, but there were sufficient surprises in most of the nine winter sports on the program to make the Games interesting.

The 62-member Canadian team won single gold, silver and bronze medals to finish 11th, just behind Italy but ahead of such winter sports stalwarts as Sweden and France. In the points column, Canada's showing was the best in 16 years.

There were bitter disappointments among some of the big name Alpine skiers who didn't win gold medals to enrich their bankbooks.

But those who watched won't forget quickly one of the most poignant scenes on the Alpine skiing slopes when blonde Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., won the women's giant slalom gold medal.

Laurie Kreiner, Kathy's older sister, went down the mountain into the arms of Kathy for a tearful moment of congratulation. Kathy started No. 1 in the race. Laurie was 28th and placed 27th.

Laurie and veteran Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que., are quitting the national team after the Canadian championships later this month.

Canada's other two medals were silver by speed skier Cathy Priestner of Calgary and bronze by figure skater Toller Cranston of Toronto.

Cranston found himself bored and overfed in the Olympic Village. He objected to the few personal political notes in the Games when he criticized East Europeans for alleged favoritism in judging their own skaters.

Franz Klammer of Austria won the men's downhill on opening day and became a national hero, but reports that he earns more than $100,000 a year from ski manufacturers could tarnish his amateur status.

Austrian coach Toni Sailer offered to resign after most of his country's skiers failed to perform up to expectations.

Then came the last of the 37 events—the closing-day jumping from a towering height. Austrian Karl Schnabl and his younger team-mate Toni Innauer were one-two.

In the 90-metre event, Schnabl's jumps of 220 and 310 feet earned him 234.8 points. Innauer, 17, slipped to 298 feet after the longest jump of the day, 337 feet, and collected 222.9 points. Henry Glass of East Germany took the bronze with 209.318 and 221.7 points.

Peter Wilson of Ottawa led the outclassed Canadian jumping team, placing 45th with jumps of 261 and 247 feet for 154.7 points.

Then came the closing ceremony in the Olympic Ice Stadium where Olympic champions John Curry of Britain and Dorothy Hamill of the United States gave a figure-skating exhibition.

Children scrambled gleefully around two sleds crammed with red tulips. Masked folk dancers pranced and stamped to a Tyrolean accordion in ancient tradition and another folk group weaved light patterns in the stadium, darkened as they formed the letters LP for Lake Placid, the New York State resort where the 1980 Games will be held.

Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, proclaimed the Games closed, the twin Olympic flames were doused and the Olympic flag lowered to be raised again at Lake Placid.

The Soviet Union, with its powerful array of speed skaters, cross-country skiers and champion hockey team, nearly doubled its medal production of four years ago.

The Russians won 13 gold medals to seven for the East Germans, and in total medals led the final standing with 27. In the unofficial team points, Russia outscored East Germany 231 to 156.

The U.S. was third in the points table based on the 10-4-2-1 count for the first six placings in final events.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Canada led Mexico 3-1 Saturday in the first day of play of the American Zone series of the Thomas Cup world badminton championships.

Roy Diaz Gonzalez of Mexico defeated Mike Epstein of Vancouver 15-10. But that was the only victory for the Mexicans who from then on lagged badly. They were no earning 82 points, and fourth-placed West Germany had 77.

Canada's 26 points and 11th place was its best showing since the 1960 Games at Squaw Valley, Calif., when it had 32.

Tatiana Averina, a 25-year-old student from Gor'kiy in central Russia, won more medals than anyone else with two golds and two bronzes in women's speed skating. American speed skater Sheila Young was a triple winner—gold, silver and bronze.

But Rosi Mittermaier was the biggest individual story. She won two skiing gold and missed becoming the first woman to score an Alpine triple when Kathy Kreiner won the clock by 12-10ths of a second.

Rosi, daughter of a Bavarian hotel owner—she works for him as a waitress—was refreshingly open-minded about missing a triple, and credited Kathy with being a better skier.

Rosi's winning smile already has brought an offer of $120,000 from a toothpaste manufacturer to do television commercials—pushing his product.

And million-dollar-plus offers await figure skaters to turn professional after the world championships in Göteborg, Sweden, next month. Defending champion Diane de Leeuw, American-born but skating for the Netherlands, and the new Olympic champion, Miss Hamill, are two of the girls the ice show promoters are seeking. Miss de Leeuw was the silver winner of the women's singles here.

The hockey tournament, weakened by the continued absence of Canada, and Sweden's withdrawal over players jumping to the pros, was strictly a Russian-Czech show.

They clashed in the final Saturday night, and the Czechs almost won except for a disallowed goal and a third-period penalty that opened the gates for two quick goals by Russian stars Alexander Yakushev and Valery Kharlamov and a 4-3 victory.

Czechoslovakia ended with the silver medal, their lone one of the Games.

The Russians, down 2-0 in the first period, had to come from behind twice to nip the flu-weakened Czechs.

Czech coach Jan Stastny said the Russians were lucky to win and the disallowed Czech goal in the first period was "stolen" by Swedish referee Ake Hanquist.

Persistence Pays Off For Woodland-Izard

Cliffhangers seemed the order of the day Sunday during finals of the annual Racquet Club of Victoria invitational badminton tournament.

Don Woodland and Angus Izard of the host club finally succeeded in winning the men's doubles event after reaching the final for three straight years — but Les Timar and John Clarke of Vancouver didn't go down easily.

Down 13-7 in the first game, Woodland and Izard fought back to win 18-14 only to lose the second game 15-8. In the third game, the Victorians were down 10-4 before rallying to tie it up and take the lead. Timar and Clarke then came back to make it match point both ways before Woodland and Izard came up with 17-16 decision and the overall victory.

Consolation Honors For Saanich Bantams

PORTLAND — Saanich Metro Toyota Braves topped White Rock 6-4 Sunday to win the consolation final of the annual President's Day bantam hockey tournament.

Avalanches Bring Death To 9 Skiers

PARIS (AP) — Avalanches roared down ski slopes Sunday at vacation-packed French resorts from the Alps to the Pyrenees, killing at least nine persons, including Jean-Pierre Augert, a former member of France's national ski team.

Several other persons were reported missing as rescue teams probed avalanches by torchlight.

Augert, cousin of Jean-Noel Augert, a former world champion, was swept away while skiing alongside a recognized trail at La Toussuire in the Alps. Two friends with him were uninjured and raised the alarm. Augert, 30, was married last year to Michele Petit, navigator of the winning car in the 1973 Monte Carlo Rally.

Two avalanches swept down the slopes at the Pyrenean resort of La Mongie on Sunday afternoon. Four bodies were recovered by early evening but it was thought a total of eight skiers might have been buried.

Single skiers were killed at Avoriaz, Meribel, Vars, and Val d'Isere in the Alps. All the victims were reported to be French.

Cup Returns to Island with Tide

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Tell a Vancouver Island rugby fan that the Victoria Crimsons Tide is about to play the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds and he or she will know — it's going to be close.

Some 600 fans flocked to Macdonald Park Sunday, and they weren't disappointed as the Tide turned back a stiff UBC challenge to win 16-10 and clinch the McKeehan Cup, symbol of provincial inter-city rugby supremacy.

The fans — many probably remembering last year's classic match when UBC edged the Tide by a single point to take the cup, and the clash two years ago when the same teams tied 10-10 and had to share the trophy — were kept on the edge of their seats throughout.

At no stage was it a cinch just who was going to win.

With captain Ken Wilkie and No. 8 Gary Johnston leading a tremendous forward surge, the Tide kept the Birds pinned in their own half for the first 15 minutes.

And yet the Vancouver team was the first to get on the scoreboard when backrow forward Doug Harvey raced away on a good break. When he was tackled, UBC players quickly heeled the ball and little scrum-half Preston Wiley cleverly worked the blindside for a try. He converted it himself from almost on the sideline to put the Birds ahead 6-0.

But that didn't upset the Tide. Within five minutes the Victoria pack was back camped on the UBC line and prop Mick Eckardt plunged over for a try. Standoff-half Pat Simmons was successful with the conversion to make it 6-6.

Then at the 30-minute mark, Simmons, who had moved in from the centre to replace the injured Gille Greiz, who was chosen as stand-off but was unable to start, booted a beautiful drop goal to put Victoria ahead 9-6 by half time.

Despite not winning as much ball in the set plays, the robust young UBC players kept trying and a fine move 10 minutes into the second half ended in a try by centre

Robbie Greiz to put them in the lead 10-9.

Simmons came to the rescue again two minutes later when he kicked a long penalty goal to edge the Tide ahead 12-10 but it was his Coviclan clubmate Wes Thomas who really saved the day for the Islanders.

Taking a pass near the right touchline, the burly winger set off at a fast clip and weaved through a series of players to score a classic try on the left side of the posts. That try, coming at a time when it looked as though UBC was about to storm back in the lead once more, proved just enough to take the sting out of the visitors.

The victory left the Tide with a perfect 3-0 win-loss record in the four-team, round-robin competition. Victoria nipped Vancouver Rebs 3-0 earlier in the season and last weekend beat the Fraser Valley Rebs 29-7.

In Victoria Union play Saturday, the University of Victoria Vikings moved into a tie for first place in the first division by overpowering Saanich Velox 31-0 at UVic.

Rams Locked Out by Roadrunners

Mt. Douglas teams experienced an opposite type of reaction Saturday but it was "the same old feeling" enjoyed by coach Don Horwood and his Oak Bay squad.

The Bays, who haven't been beaten by a Vancouver Island rival in almost three seasons, cruised to their 10th straight victory in the Victoria Inter-High School Boys' Basketball League by defeating Parkland Panthers 88-49 at Oak Bay.

gomery topped Parkland with 16 points.

More noteworthy, however, was Reynolds Roadrunners' 67-62 decision over Esquimalt Dockers.

The victory clinched a playoff berth for Reynolds and eliminated Mt. Doug's Rams. Mt. Doug now trails Reynolds by six points and has only two games remaining.

The Runners also jumped up the second-place picture, moving into a third-place tie in the "B" division with Spectrum. The third-place teams are only two points behind second-place Parkland.

Dockers, tied for last place in the "A" division, gave Reynolds quite an argument. Esquimalt led 34-29 at the half and 54-43 after three quarters, but couldn't hold off Reynolds in the fourth frame.

Big Jim Dunn, Eric Jones and Randy Kellar were outstanding for Reynolds. Dunn scored 18 points, Jones 14 and Kellar 12. Kellar counted seven of his total in the final quarter.

Bill Barber, with 17, and Roman Kubica, with 13, topped Esquimalt scoring.

While the Rams experienced disappointment without playing, Mt. Doug's girls' team found joy in New Westminster. Spurred by Cindy Smith, the Ramblers defeated New Westminster 43-36 to capture top honors in the annual Hyack girls' tournament.

Smith scored 21 points as Mt. Doug defeated Salmon Arm 59-38 in Saturday's semifinal, then added another 18 in the final. Cindy and teammate Bev Galt both were named to the tournament's all-star team.

Oak Bay's girls also enjoyed success. Third in the "B" division, Oak Bay clipped Parkland 40-28 in league play Saturday.

Mary-Jo Weicker led Oak Bay with 12 points while Eleanor Benn topped Parkland with 13.

Finish by Joyce Produces Record

WINNIPEG — Victoria sprinter Joyce Yakubowich can add two gold medals and a share of a Canadian Open record to her collection of honors collected on the track.

The latest rewards achieved before a delighted crowd of 4,500 fans at the fifth annual Knights of Columbus indoor games here, can be attributed to her strong finishing kick.

With Joyce running an exceptional anchor leg, Canada's Pan-Am Games gold medal-winning team set a Canadian Open record in the women's 4x400-metre relay.

Juane McTaggart, Margaret Stride, Rochelle Campbell and Mrs. Yakubowich were timed in 3:47.4, more than a full second better than the previous Canadian Open mark.

Victory — and the record — didn't come until the final 15 metres when the Victoria runner displayed her great finishing kick for the second time in the program to nip June Smith, the anchor-leg runner for the Washington, D.C., Striders.

Joyce, who won the Pan-Am gold medal in the 400 metres with a stunning 51.6-second clocking and is eighth-ranked in the world, beat Smith in similar fashion in the 400 metres. Both were timed in 57.5 seconds.

Campbell, from Guelph, Ont., was third in 57.7.

Francie Larrieu accounted for the only other record established during the evening. Ranked No. 1 in the women's 1000 metres, Francie won her specialty in 2:44.5 to better the previous mark of 2:45.9 set in 1971 by Penny Werthner of Ottawa.

Larrieu, the first female member of the highly-rated Pacific Coast Track Club of San Jose, Calif., hung back until the final 100 metres when she burst past fellow U.S. runner Jan Merrill to win.

At least part of Bill Tetley's Thunder Bay, Ont., rink will be around to defend the Canadian men's curling championship the Tetley foursome won last year.

Tetley decided not to pursue the title but his third, Rick Lang, skipped his own rink to the Northern Ontario championship over the weekend.

The rink skipped by the 22-year-old Lang swamped Ian McTavish of North Bay 12-1 Saturday to clinch a berth in next month's Canadian championship in Regina, March 7-13.

Jim Ussel of Montreal, Joe Gurovka of Mississauga, Ont., Clare DeBlonde of Winnipeg, Roger Anholt of Moose Jaw, Sask., and Wayne Sokolsky of Calgary also won berths in the national playoffs over the weekend.

The only provincial title not decided is British Columbia's, which should be known by Tuesday, when the Interior and Coast champions play off at Victoria today and Tuesday.

Provincial titles had already been decided in the four eastern provinces. They belong to Jack MacDuff of St. John's, Nfld., Ken MacDonald of Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Dave Sullivan of Halifax and Dave Sullivan of Fredericton.

Ussel won the first of three Quebec final at Alma against Gerry Lawless of Val d'Or to win his third provincial title in a row. Ussel downed Lawless 7-5, then needed an extra end to win the second game 8-7.

Gurovka, who skipped the 1966 Ontario winners, had three members of the 1971 provincial champions—skip Bob Charlebois, Ray Lilly and Jim McGrath.

The final rock of the 12th end of a playoff gave Gurovka's rink three and a dramatic 10-9 victory over Earle Morris of Ottawa at Peterborough.

DeBlonde, who had lost out 11 times in the Manitoba finals, defeated two-time provincial champion Terry Braunstein of Domain 11-3 Saturday at Flin Flon to complete a two-game sweep of a best-of-three final. DeBlonde won 9-8 Friday night. DeBlonde has his brother Gary at third and brother Don and Doug Kirkmeier at second and lead.

Anholt came through the B division of the Saskatchewan championship and needed 5-4 and 7-6 wins over Larry McGrath of Kindersley to take the title at Kindersley. Curling by Anholt are third Gord Stewart, second Bob Hicks and lead Bill Wilson.

At Calgary, Sokolsky overwhelmed Don Longmore of Red Deer, Alta., 13-6 in the sixth round to clinch the Alberta title. Sokolsky had won 19 playoff games in a row before losing to Dennis Graber of Valleyview in the last round. Sokolsky has Frank Morissette at third, John Cottam at second and Shane Wylie at lead.

Hoop Boxers Win a Pair

POWELL RIVER — London Boxing Club Seniors of the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League won a pair of exhibition games here Saturday.

With Duff McCaskey firing 26 points to set the scoring pace, the Boxers defeated Port McNeill 72-57 despite a 28-point effort by Terry McDonald of Port McNeill.

Jim MacKay was the big gun for the Victoria club in second game, notching 28 points in a 95-62 triumph over Powell River Lakers.

Hooley Captures Racquet 'Spiel

Gordon Hooley skipped the Dave Johnston rink of the Victoria Curling Club to an 8-5 victory over Gordie Moore's foursome, also from the Victoria Club, in the final of the "A" event in the Racquet Club's men's bonspiel Sunday.

Don Lowdon of Victoria Club took "B" event with an 8-3 decision over a rink skipped by Rick Gordon of Playland. Ray Benwell of Playland won "C" event and Ches Hays of the host club "D" event.

Monkman Grabs Schoolboy Title

A Maple Ridge foursome skipped by Greg Monkman captured the B.C. high school boys' curling championship Saturday by finishing the eight-rink, round-robin play-down with a 6-1 record at Victoria Curling Club.

The Fraser Valley rink, tripped 13-4 by Vancouver Island champion Duncan on Thursday, bounced back and collected the victory with a last-draw 10-8 victory over Crawford Bay on Saturday morning while Duncan (Vi Gamble, Randy Wise, Murray Blom and Glen Quarmby) suffered a 5-2 loss at the hands of Kitimat.

Monkman, Kim Neubaner, Mike Fehler and Jim Mackinson now will represent B.C. in the Canadian play-downs in Kapuskasing, Ont., starting March 14.

Duncan got off to an impressive 4-0 start in games but never fully recovered after being edged 6-5, as Revelstoke stole two in the last end Friday night.

There was a possibility of a three-way playoff when the final draw began with Duncan and Maple Ridge tied for the lead and Crawford Bay only a game behind at 4-2.

Sparkes Wins Fifth Crown

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Bernie Sparkes of the Burnaby Winter Club won his fifth Pacific Coast Curling Championship at the Victoria Curling Club Sunday afternoon with an 8-7, come-from-behind victory over Gary Sigurdson of Cloverdale.

Sparkes and his rink of Bert Gretzinger, third; Al Cook, second; and Kevin Bauer, lead, won five straight games in the eight-rink PCCA event. Sparkes is undefeated in playoff action, having previously won six straight games in the Vancouver zone play-off.

On Saturday he defeated Jack Finnogason of the Vancouver Curling Club 8-4 in the "A" final. His previous wins were over Craig MacRae of Nanaimo and Tom Campbell of the Valley Curling Club in "A" side and John Munro of Abbotsford in the "B" side of the modified double-knockout competition.

For a while Sunday, it appeared that Sigurdson would force an extra game. Playing extremely well, he scored deuces on the third and seventh end while stealing a single in the fifth to forge into a 6-2 lead.

But Sparkes, as was the case through most of the play-downs here, wasn't through. He just got tougher and slowly assumed command. The pressure told on Sigurdson.

Sparkes got a pair back in the eighth with a fine last shot to chip out a partially hidden Sigurdson stone. He then stole a single on the ninth when Sigurdson got only one rock when trying for a double.

But it was in the 10th that disaster really struck the Sigurdson rink.

It was a peculiar end and it looked as if Sigurdson might be on his way to a big count when with last rock, he had three counters in the house with the thirds and skips yet to throw.

Sparkes then elected to play up to the Sigurdson rocks and it paid off handsomely. Twice Sigurdson came out a trifle narrow, once when attempting a long raise-takeout double, with Sparkes lying short; and again, after Sparkes had put another rock in the nest, to be counting three. Sigurdson threw a runner on his last rock attempting to spill the Sparkes' stones but was narrow, and when everything had come to rest Sparkes was still lying two and had the lead at 6-5.

Sigurdson could only manage a single on the 11th, getting his point with a last-rock draw to the button. He had two rocks in the house in the 12th when Sparkes went down to throw his last rock. But Sparkes made no mistake. He made a perfect hit and stayed for the winning point.

Sparkes previously won PCCA titles as a third for the late Lyall Dagg of Vancouver in 1971, as a skip for the Giles brothers of North Vancouver in 1972, as a third for Jack Tucker of Richmond in 1973, and as a third for Jim Armstrong of Richmond in 1974.

The two Vancouver Island rinks, Bob Gallagher of Playland, and MacRae went out early, losing two straight.

Munro put Gallagher on the sidelines early Saturday with a 9-7, 13-end decision in a game that Gallagher should have won in the 12th.

But as was the case in his first game against Sigurdson, Gallagher couldn't find his draw weight when he needed it most. MacRae's oyster came from Vic Wood of Burnaby, who was the defending PCCA champion, 9-8. MacRae lost his first game to Sparkes.

In one of the Highlights Saturday, Munro beat Wood, 3-2, in a game in which six of the first seven ends were blanked.

Sparkes now will meet Darryl Will of Kamloops, the B.C. Curling Association champion, in a best-of-three series for the right to enter the Brier.

The first game is scheduled tonight at the Victoria Curling Club at 7 p.m. The second will be played at 12 noon, Tuesday, and the third, if necessary, Tuesday night at 7.

'Getting on Good Side' Is More Than Cliche

SPORRS, Conn. (AP) "Getting on someone's good side" is more than a figure of speech, says a psychologist who sees clear patterns in the way men and women prefer to be approached.

If one wants to get on a stranger's "good side," said Dr. Jeffrey Fisher, it will mean approaching a woman from the front and a man from the side.

Fisher, an assistant professor of psychology at the University of Connecticut, said in studies on non-verbal communication he found a pattern of negative response from people when they are approached from their "bad sides."

Where a person likes to have his "personal space invaded" from, is rooted in sex-linked attitudes on competition and sociability, says Fisher.

In a recent article in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, Fisher and Prof. Donn Byrne wrote: "A female who wants to befriend an unknown male may be surprised to find that a non-threatening (to her) eyeball-to-eyeball approach causes consternation and alarm."

"In the same way, a male who attempts to ingratiate himself with an unknown female by sitting down beside her in a non-threatening (to him) position may be surprised that he elicits a 'Miss Muffet' reaction."

In two different studies among 125 students in the campus library, the researchers found females felt more comfortable if they were approached face-to-face by strangers. Males preferred strangers to approach them from the side, the researchers said.

But when interacting with friends, women liked them to come from the side and men preferred a frontal approach.

The study was done by interviewers who approached subjects from different directions and recorded their answers to subjective questions.

dear

DEAR ABBY: I too, received an anonymous telephone call concerning my husband. It went something like this:

"The phone rang in my office in our small town, weekly newspaper, and the woman who called asked my identity and then said:

"Is your daughter home?" "Which one?" I asked. "I have three."

"The one who's a nurse!" "A nurse? Why do you ask?"

"Well, I just saw your husband drive by Mr. Pleasant and Roosevelt, and he had a young woman dressed in white with him!"

I laughed (I couldn't help it), then she banged down the receiver. The small cafe next to us had only two girls working there (in mid-afternoon), and one of them had caught her hand in a mixer. The other girl asked if one of us would please drive the injured girl to the emergency hospital, and it was easier for my husband to get away than it was for me, so he drove her there.

What did that woman expect to gain except to make me unhappy?

I'm glad I laughed. It must have taken the wind out of her sails. —Ruth in Iowa.

DEAR RUTH: I happen to agree with you. But read on for a letter from someone who disagrees with both of us.

DEAR ABBY: When I read your advice to the woman who had received an anonymous call telling her that her husband was having an affair, I became furious. You told that woman "that the caller was probably a miserable person trying to make others miserable, and the wife should forget about the call!"

Well, Abby, let me tell my story: I, too, was married to a fine, professional man for a number of years. I, too, received an anonymous phone call telling me that my husband was having an affair with his secretary. I, too, was dumbfounded. However, instead of forgetting it, I did my own investigating and discovered that my husband was in fact dating his secretary — and had been for some time.

In my opinion, the person who informed me was not a "miserable person" trying to make me miserable. She was simply a friend who was trying to tip me off.

I think it is absolutely disgusting that the wife is always the last to know about her husband's extracurricular activities. I'd rather be miserable knowing the truth about my husband than live in "ignorant bliss" with a man who makes a mockery out of his marriage vows. —Throwing The Bum Out

INK DRAWINGS ON DISPLAY

A five-day show in Emily Carr House next week will display the work of Victoria artist Harriet Lopatecki, whose specialty is older homes and heritage buildings.

Her exhibition of 25 ink drawings comes on the heels of heritage day in B.C., which was Thursday.

The artist has had two previous shows since coming to Victoria 2½ years ago.

Even Baby's Teeth Need Cleaning

The real culprit in dental decay is the colorless film of bacterial plaque that forms constantly on everyone's teeth — even a baby's.

You should start cleaning your child's teeth as soon as his first incisors (front teeth) have come in. Since it may be difficult to brush an infant's teeth, a parent can remove the plaque from the teeth by using a cotton swab or piece of gauze wrapped around a finger.

Pre-school children can be taught to brush effectively, but parental participation and supervision are necessary for several years. By the time the child has all of his front teeth, he should be used to the idea and can do most of the brushing by himself.

Since children are prone to tooth decay, they should clean their teeth after each meal and every night before going to bed.

To remove plaque from the outer, inner and biting surfaces of the teeth, most dentists recommend using a brush that has a straight handle, a flat brushing surface and soft, end-rounded bristles.

February is Dental Health Month. As part of the observance, the Victoria Times, in co-operation with the Victoria and District Dental Society, today begins a series of six articles on facts you should know about dental health.

At what age should my child start using a toothbrush? Should I help him brush his teeth?

volves angling the bristle tips at a 45-degree angle against the gum line. By using tiny back-and-forth scrubbing motions you can clean the whole tooth by slowly drawing the brush from gumline to the chewing surface.

Chewing surfaces also are brushed with short, scrubbing strokes. Dental floss is used to clean between the teeth.

Disinfecting tablets or solution — which may be obtained at a drugstore — can be used after cleaning to check the effectiveness of the child's brushing methods.

The head of the brush should be small enough to provide easy access to every tooth. Children need brushes smaller than those designed for adults.

The most frequent tooth-brushing method recommended for plaque removal in-

Dear Mike:
My 1968 Camaro has transmission problems — this is with a 4-speed. First, when I let out the clutch, to move out from a stop, the car shakes and vibrates unless I hit the gas pedal just right. Second, in reverse it sometimes pops out of gear. SHIFTLESS.

Dear Shiftless:
Check for broken engine mounts; also for misalignment at the bellhousing. Or possibly it's worn shift forks. Starts

Dear Mike:
I happened to notice that my 1975 Maverick is losing lubricant from the upper ball-joint. "Permanent" grease is oozing from the rubber retaining cup on the right side. I've been told that the only way to prevent loss of this important ball-joint lubricant is to replace the entire ball-joint. What's your opinion? — OOZ-ING

Dear Oozing:
Buy yourself a set of screw-in Zerk grease fittings and a hand-operated lube gun. Remove the lubrication plugs at your ball-joints (in fact, remove all plugs) and replace them with the Zerks. Then lube your Maverick at about 5,000-mile intervals, being careful not to burst any rubber seals.

Dear Mike:
When I slow down for a stop in my 1973 Toyota Mark II, the automatic transmission drops into low gear with a clunk. The dealer tells me they all do it. I'm afraid the clunk will eventually harm my transmission or drivetrain. What's your opinion? — CLUNK

Dear Clunk:
If it's the 3-speed Toyoglide, you might have a bad modulator valve or an obstruction in the vacuum line. High idle speed can also cause harsh downshifting, as can a worn universal joint. Do have it fixed, because as you suspect, it's not doing your car any good.

Repairing Electric Plug Is Easy

By A. J. HAND

(c) 1976, Popular Science

Hand Around the House

Give an electrical plug enough time, and eventually it's going to need replacement. Maybe it will get smashed against the wall when somebody rearranges the furniture. Or maybe the kids will do it by yanking it out of the wall by the cord. At any rate, when the time comes, you're the one who has to make the repair.

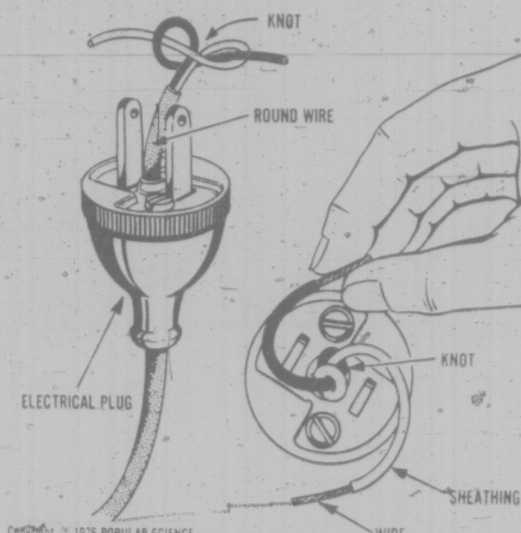

And in some cases, repairing the damage can be almost as easy as doing the damage. Lightweight, parallel two-conductor cord — the stuff that looks like two wires running side by side — will take a clamp-on replacement plug you can install in about a minute. To do the job, snip the cord off square at the end. No wire conductor should stick out beyond the insulation. Silt the cord between the wires for a distance of 1/4 inch. Then slip the end of the cord into the opening of the plug — as far as it will go — and snap the plug's clamping level shut. That's it. Clamp-on plugs should only be used on lightweight cords. Usually 18-gauge is the heaviest they will handle. Wires too heavy for the plugs generally won't fit into them, or if they do fit, you won't be able to close the clamping lever. If you find either of these two problems confronting you, you should move up to a heavier type of plug.

These heavy plugs will require a little more work than the clamp-on type, but if the cord is still in good shape at the end, installation is still very simple. Slip the end of the cord through the back end of the plug and tie the underwriters' knot shown in the sketch. This knot forms a gob of wire that will prevent strain on the connections next time somebody yanks on the cord. Next, lead the wires around their prongs as shown in the sketch. (Note: With some plugs you can lead the wires directly to their screws without going around the prongs. In any case, the recesses molded into the plug will show you where to thread the wires). Wrap the bare copper conductors around their screws in a clockwise direction. Tighten the screws and insert the protective fiber cover that comes with the plug over the connections.

If the cord itself has been damaged, the repair will be a little more complicated. You'll have to cut the cord back past the damage. If the cord has an outer jacket, remove about three inches of it. Use a knife, but be careful not to cut the insulation around the conductors. Slip the cord into the back of the plug and tie the underwriters' knot. Run the wires to their screws to see how much insulation you'll need to remove from each wire. You want each wire insulated up to the point where it reaches its screw. Beyond that point, remove the insulation with your knife, but be careful not to cut any of the conductor strands. Once the insulation has been stripped, proceed as above.

COURTESY © 1976 POPULAR SCIENCE

If you are repairing a three-prong plug, be sure to buy a three pronger to replace it. In this case, you'll have three wires to connect. Connect the black wire to the brass screw, the white wire to the silver screw and the green wire to the green screw.

Personal Touch In Mixed Styles

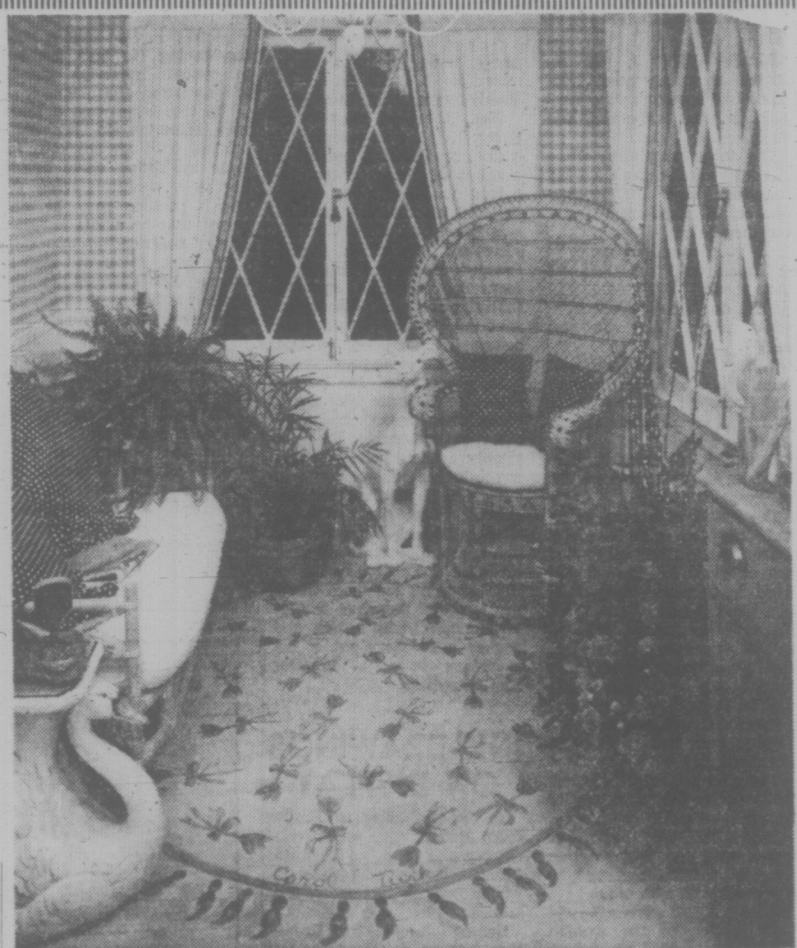

Mixing up furniture styles and combining them with unusual accessories is the personal way to decorate. And these are the rooms that are still making news. Add to this the indoor plant mania, still on the rise, and you have refreshing, individualized interiors that were not even conceivable several years ago.

A case in point is the room shown here. No two elements are alike, a welcome change from the familiar "match 'em up" concept. Banks and pots of plants frame the room and bring the various elements together.

Centermost, and most important, is the rug, not a rug at all in the conventional sense, but painted on the floor. This gives freedom to choose your own size, pattern and color, without tripping all over town. If you are not gifted with a talent for art, use a wallpaper or fabric pattern as a guide. From these you can make stencils or you can trace the designs on the floor, after you have prepared the floor for painting and applied the base coat. Your local paint dealer can advise you on the preparation and suggest the best paint for you to use.

After all of this work, you want to protect the painted surface as best you can from scratching or chipping. Sealers or one of the Polyurethane products as a top coat will resist normal wear on an enameled surface. If you have used deck paint, such protection might not be necessary, depending upon the amount of traffic the floor receives.

Diverse Styles Refreshing

Plants soften the contrast of many diverse styles in this small room. But the ceramic dog, a casual rattan love seat, tropical king's chair and an unexpected swan table are all in scale.

Raiding the Fridge Produces Tasty Salads

To continue the theme of salads as good meals at this time of the year, today the use of leftovers or small amounts of prepared food in the refrigerator are included in the following recipes.

The amounts listed can obviously be adjusted to the needs of one person or for many, since leftovers depend on the quantities cooked or prepared, in the first place. Amounts need not be rigidly met. If there are less than 2 cups of cooked beans of some other kind than the ones in the first recipe, they can certainly be substituted. If a little more than a cup of cooked rice is on hand, use it to make up the difference.

Even one cooked beef left from a previous meal is useful as garnish, either thinly sliced or diced.

One head of celery goes a long way — coarser stems for soups, the middle stems for dicing and fine slicing, the youngest for just pleasant eating. Leaves are just as useful for abundant minerals.

A couple of hard boiled eggs are a nutritious addition for any vegetable salad, and half an egg is better than none so don't waste even that much.

Stale bread or toast left from breakfast should not be discarded — it makes a desirable crisp ingredient for a softer textured salad. So long as it is good bread, find a useful purpose for even the dried out crumbs.

Part of an opened can of fruit is a real find in the refrigerator, or of a can of vegetable. If it was emptied into a glass jar with a lid, there has been no spoilage for three days. A little fruit combines well with many salads, even those containing meat.

Now let us see how to put these things together.

When weight control is not a chief problem, your choice of a green leafy vegetable can be the base for a bean salad. Soybeans probably give the highest grade of protein with the least calories and certainly the best flavor.

Soybean Vegetable Salad

2 cups cooked soybeans
1/2 tsp salt
2 whole cloves garlic
1 cup diced cooked carrots
1 cup chopped raw celery with leaves
1 cup cooked brown rice
1/2 cup chopped watercress or land cress
1/2 cup homemade yogurt from skim milk powder slices of cooked beets

Soak dry soybeans overnight and simmer in same water next day until tender; OR cover dry beans with cold water, bring to boil for 5 minutes, then set aside, covered tightly, for 2 hours. Add 1/2 teaspoon salt, adding more water if necessary, add garlic and simmer about 2 hours or until almost tender.

The beans can now be mashed down with a potato masher a little or left whole as desired. Let cool.

To make the salad: Mix 50 beans with carrots and celery. Mix rice with watercress or land cress (use mixed parsley and kale tips as substitute).

Serve in separate mounds on plate. Top each mound with spoonful of homemade yogurt, and circle plate with slices of cooked beet.

Colorful as summer in winter, satisfying without snacking until the next mealtime, this is an economical meal for 2 or 3.

A salad with crunch is liked by people who object to the predominating leafy green theme. Here is one to please: its texture is excellent for young and old who too often are given soft foods causing harm to teeth, gums and digestion.

Crisp Vegetable Salad

1 cup fine diced celery
1/2 cup fine chopped celery
1/2 cup chopped or coarse ground raw peanuts, unsalted
1 1/2 cups shredded raw carrot
2 hard-cooked eggs, diced
1 cup wholewheat toast crumbs
4 Tbsp sunflower oil
2 Tbsp fresh lemon juice
1/2 tsp salt (optional)
1 Tbsp chopped fresh chervil (mint or parsley will do)

To make the toast crumbs—toast wholewheat bread slice slowly until dry all through; crumble with rolling pin, but not too fine.

Mix first 6 ingredients together in bowl.

Shake oil and lemon juice together in glass bottle or jar with tight top; add salt (omit if possible) and chervil. Sprinkle over salad as soon as the vegetables have been prepared to seal all cut surfaces against loss of vitamins.

Serve on split homemade wholewheat buns topped with sliced Cheddar cheese, this salad makes a light lunch for 3 or 4. For a larger, complete meal, add half a large banana and 1/4 cup homemade yogurt to each serving.

Now for another man-size salad, full of good flavors, some sweet and some sour. Some ingredients are diced so their character is retained; others are shredded; and the nuts are ground in a little hand-moull grinder to get them all through the salad.

As with so many good food recipes, these amounts are not critical, they are meant to be helpful for beginners who want guidance in composing a salad that is something more than a lettuce leaf yet does not need costly ingredients even in small amounts.

Cabbage Salad with Pineapple

2 cups cubed wholewheat bread
1 small green cabbage, shredded to make 3 cups
1/2 tsp salt
1 Tbsp sunflower oil
1 cup shredded carrots
1 cup small diced celery with leaves
1 cup diced canned unsweetened pineapple
2 Tbsp chopped parsley
1 Tbsp chopped fresh chervil or basil

1/2 cup homemade yogurt
1/2 cup diced Cheddar cheese
1/4 cup ground unsalted peanuts

Have ready the bread cubes, dried on a tray in warm oven or top of stove until quite crisp. Wash and dry the cabbage. Shred by hand, cutting out the core and thick ribs for soup-making. Turn into a large bowl, sprinkle with salt and oil to coat all surfaces.

Shred carrots add to bowl, tossing with forks to coat. Dice celery, add to bowl.

That is something to get the teeth into. Serves 4 or 5.

Small portions of leftovers can be useful; don't keep cooked items longer than three days, even stored in glass. Larger quantities can be more economically used frozen for a future meal.

These suggestions deal with ordinary day by day bits and pieces which can be money-savers instead of money-wasters when combined with other freshly prepared items. They may be the means of balancing the family food budget, a worthy project for all thinking homemakers.

Vic High Remembers

J. D. LORIMER
... 16th principal

Next Friday afternoon (February 20) there will be a ceremony in front of Victoria Senior-Secondary School on Grap Street (Victoria High to past and present students) in which flags proudly showing the black and gold colors and the crest of the school, will be unfurled.

This will mark start of a program (culminating with a home-coming weekend, May 7 to 9) planned to celebrate opening of the first high school in British Columbia, at the top of Yates Street in this city, one hundred years ago.

Within 38 years that little log schoolhouse, with its two rooms, one teacher and about 70 pupils, had gone through three moves to larger, and ever larger, quarters.

Last move was to the present Grant Street site, where the school was opened on May 1, 1914, by Hon. T. W. Paterson, lieutenant-governor of British Columbia.

Why then, is the flag ceremony arranged for next Friday, a February date?

J. Duncan Lorimer, now principal of the school, says "when we started looking through old records we discovered that while the school itself had not been officially opened, classes were being held and sports programs had been started."

"We also found that on February 20, 1914, a Friday by lucky coincidence, the gymnasium in this present building was used for a first time."

On that day a girls' basketball game was played between King Edward High of Vancouver and Victoria High.

"We won with a score of seven to five," Lorimer says, "and somehow, that seemed a good win to commemorate."

Beside him, as he talked, was a 1914 Camosun (school magazine) that recorded names of the local players as they were then: Florie McNeil, Theresa Robinson, Mabel Burridge, Janet McIntyre (captain), Edna Leigh, Margaret Dunn and J. Halliday (no first name).

Today, Margaret Dunn is Mrs. Harold Beckwith and Mabel Burridge is Mrs. R. C. Hardie of Yellow Point.

Janet McIntyre, I'm told, became Mrs. Barton and Florie McNeil, Mrs. Good. I've been unable to learn more about Robinson, Leigh or Halliday.

Others include Ira Dilworth, H. H. Smith, Alex. Robinson, Alex. G. Smith, S. J. Willis (first principal in the present school), William Burns, J. P. McLeod, John N. Muir, J. H. McLaughlin and S. D. Pope.

Chairman of this year's centenary planning committee is Lawrie Wallace, a former student and teacher in the school and now British Columbia's deputy principal secretary.

Lorimer is honorary chairman, and much of the actual organizing work is being done in his school, by members of his staff, in co-operation with some 20 committees that include a good percentage of former students.

Registration for the home-coming weekend is growing rapidly.

"Letters of acceptance are coming in from as far away as Hawaii, Spain, southern California, eastern Canada and the Maritimes," Lorimer says.

One family of four "all in their late 80s" and now living in widely separated areas "are all coming back to Victoria for the reunion."

That, however, is still several months away. In the meantime, there is the ceremony next Friday.

Special guests will include Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Walter Owen, Mayor and Mrs. Michael Young, School Board chairman and Mrs. W. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrie Wallace and Miss Laurie Williams, the fifth girl to head the schools' student governing body, in 50 years.

At the appointed time, Lieutenant-Governor Owen will officially declare the centennial celebrations under way by ringing the old school bell, now in its archives.

With that signal, Mayor Young and School Board Chairman Ross will unfurl the centennial flags.

The public is invited to attend the ceremony. So, do put next Friday afternoon on your calendar and turn out to give Vic High a cheer.

Principal Lorimer predicts "it's going to be a nice sunny day."

Further information in regard to registering for the full home-coming weekend in May can be obtained by telephoning the school, 388-5456, weekdays, or by writing P. O. Box 1976, Victoria, B.C.

Works to be played at the first recital include the triosonata in C, the choral prelude on "Vater unser", and the great Prelude in E flat "pro organo pleno".

Anatomy Of a Holdup

MAN known to New York Police as the "rabbit-furred robber" is caught in a sequence during recent holdup of Manufacturers Hanover Trust bank branch. Top sequence shows the robber, wearing a leather jacket, engaging bank guard in conversation. Then he knocks guard to floor, disarms him and makes for teller's cage. Photo at right shows him escaping with guard's gun in right hand and bag of money in left. Police made photos available after the same robber struck at the Central Savings Bank in New York, getting more than $30,000.

Henry's Tour Begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger is beginning an off-postponed Latin American tour, hoping to reassure southern allies of their importance to the United States.

His first stop comes in Venezuela today, with Peru, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica and Guatemala to follow before he returns home Feb. 24.

While attempting to sidestep such divisive issues as Cuba and the Panama Canal, Kissinger will try to highlight friendly overtures. For instance, he will report in Caracas on his efforts to remove a congressionally ordered exclusion of Venezuela from trade preferences.

Venezuela and Ecuador were ordered excluded because of their membership in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which cut off oil exports to the United States in 1973.

Since neither Venezuela nor Ecuador participated in the boycott, the exclusion is resented in Latin America.

Newspaper Mailers To Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of one of six striking craft unions at The Post have voted to accept a contract offer from the newspaper's management and return to work.

The 128-to-38 vote Sunday by members of the mailers' union signalled an almost-certain end to the walkout, which began 4½ months ago.

Members of mailers' union No. 29 of the International Typographical Union are expected to return to their jobs within two weeks, a spokesman said.

To return to their jobs, the mailers and members of other Post craft unions must cross the picket lines of the pressmen's union.

BUS RIOT IN BOSTON

BOSTON (AP) — Anti-busing demonstrators and police traded accusations of brutality after a riot near South Boston High School that left dozens of persons injured and 13 arrested.

At the height of Sunday's melee, police said a crowd of about 400 anti-busing marchers wielded bottles, bricks, clubs and tire irons in an attack on police, which was co-ordinated by citizen-band radios.

The protestors, countered that police tried to break up their march for no reason and charged into them on horseback and motorcycles.

The march was organized by a group called the South

Boston Marshals. The clash began when the marchers tried to approach the high school and were met by police.

Police Commissioner Robert diGrazia called for a grand-jury investigation. He said the clash, in which at least three policemen were hurt, was a conspiracy by hoodlums to injure police.

Chemicals Causing Cancer?

Times News Service

A study by Johns Hopkins University shows that men living near a South Baltimore Allied Chemical Company plant die of lung cancer at a rate four times greater than men living in other parts of the city where there are no factories.

Dr. Genevieve Matanoski, who conducted the study, said the high cancer rate was found within a half-mile radius of the plant.

Studying death certificates from 1970, 1971, and 1972, Dr. Matanoski said 30 men in the neighborhood of 844 males died of lung cancer.

Matching socio-economic and age factors, Dr. Matanoski said the industrial neighborhood near the Allied plant would yield 394 white male deaths from lung cancer per 100,000 persons, while the inner city, and North Baltimore would have only 96 deaths per 100,000 population.

Fluorocarbons, used as propellants in spray cans, may be banned by the United States government because they might lead to an increase in skin cancer, says the head of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Alexander Schmidt says in an interview in U.S. News and World Report: "There is a theory that fluorocarbons may destroy the ozone layer in our atmosphere that filters out ultraviolet light. The fear is that the result may be an increase in skin cancer."

Schmidt says the National Academy of Sciences is studying the available evidence now and expects to produce a report within the year. Then the FDA will make a decision.

Juan de Fuca Port Seen As No Oil Spill Safeguard

SEATTLE (AP) — The Texaco Co.'s senior west coast operations officer said Saturday a single oil tanker terminal west of Port Angeles

Political Payoffs Admitted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Houston-based international conglomerate has admitted making payments to politicians in the United States and to individuals in 24 countries.

Tenneco Inc. reported the payments in a report filed during the weekend with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

In the United States, the company said, payments went to political candidates, state utility board chairmen and local government officials from 1970 to 1975.

It characterized some of the payments as campaign contributions but did not describe the nature of others.

Tenneco said it paid approximately $12 million over the five-year period to overseas lawyers, advisers, consultants and agents in connection with certain foreign operations in some 24 countries.

Tenneco said that it will disclose information on the payments to the Internal Revenue Service and will file amended tax returns.

Tenneco, which was listed in 1974 as the 24th largest U.S. corporation with gross sales of more than 1.4 billion, did not identify the recipients of the funds by name or disclose how much money was involved in some payments. It did not name the foreign countries.

It said only $10,000 spent overseas was known to have been paid directly to a foreign government employee. The money was "improperly described in the books of the company and may have been improperly deducted for U.S. income tax purposes," the company said.

Governor Dan Evans has said that most desirable location for supertankers to unload crude oil from Alaska would be at such a terminal. An underwater pipeline would move the oil across Puget Sound to refineries.

The most frequent occurrences of collisions and groundings of all types of ships are west of Port Angeles rather than east, said D. Allan Sedgewick, a Texaco vice-president.

Tidal action could spread oil spills eastward in the strait of Juan de Fuca, regardless of where the original mishap took place, Sedgewick said.

He said Evans' position "completely overlooks the fact for the past 50 years there is no record of any significant crude oil spill in Puget Sound waters."

But a spokesman for the coalition against oil pollution disputed Sedgewick's remarks, saying tanker shipments of crude oil have only become significant in the last four years.

Until 1972, the four major refineries, including Texaco's, in the Bellingham-Anacortes area were receiving 90 per cent of their crude supplies by pipeline from Canada, said

Bob Lynette, coalition president.

Evans said he was primarily interested in preventing damage from future spills but financing an oil superport is a problem.

A report issued by several state agencies indicated the cost of a port and connecting pipeline would be $400 million if completed by 1980.

Little Changes At Raffles

SINGAPORE (UPD) — The incomparable Raffles Hotel celebrates its 90th birthday this year, remarkably unchanged in a changing world.

Born when the British Empire was at its height and the sun never set on the Union Jack, the sprawling old white-washed hotel became for millions the very symbol of that empire and the colonials who ruled it.

The empire is long dead and the sun sets daily on the flag, but the 19th century lives on at Raffles.

In one of its 130 suites — there are no "rooms" at Raffles — W. Somerset Maugham wrote many of his matchless short stories of life in the East.

On the Raffles verandah Joseph Conrad spotted a brief article in the Straits-Times about a British crew abandoning their ship and leaving 800 native passengers to die — and turned it into Lord Jim.

Rudyard Kipling wrote that Raffles was the only place to dine in Singapore.

At the outset of the Second World War, with Japanese bombs raining down on the encircled and allegedly impregnable island fortress of Singapore, Raffles hosted afternoon tea-dances and ballroom dancing went on behind blackout curtains right up to the surrender.

As the dancers marched off to prison camps and prisoner projects which few would survive, hotel staff collected the Raffles silver service and buried it in the Palm Court garden.

According to one version of the story an intrepid pre-war Japanese customer of the hotel's Elizabethan Grill turned up after victory in uniform as chief of the dreaded Kempeitai secret police — and immediately noticed the absence of a huge silver beef cart.

The missing beef cart so intrigued the Japanese agent that for the rest of the war he indulged in a hobby of questioning Raffles staff members and poking around the hotel trying to solve the mystery.

On the day that sirens sounded the Japanese surrender the beef cart and the hotel silver were unearthed, polished and put back in service.

Raffles was the birthplace of countless legends of gin-crazed planters, adulterous colonial wives, drunken ships captains and the like.

The long bar became known as Cad's Alley in honor of the lounge lizards who kept their elbows on the bar and their eyes on the main chance.

In 1915 an inspired Raffles barman, Ngain Tong Doon, brought forth the Gin Sling of a marriage of two ounces of gin, one ounce of cherry brandy, a dash of cointreau, an ounce of lemon juice and a few drops of bitters.

The hotel's main dining hall, a marble-floored dream castle whose skylighted ceiling is the roof three floors above, was the scene of gargantuan feasts three times a day in the times when appetites were awesome.

A typical breakfast menu in 1889 went like this: Porridge, fried fish, mutton chops, devilled fowl, cold beef, salad, boiled eggs, cheese, toast, jam, tea or coffee and a glass of benedictine to settle it all down.

You did not choose from that menu — you ate it all. Under the management of a Trieste-born Italian, Roberto Pregarz, Raffles marches toward its centennial more often than not booked to capacity.

Pregarz supervises a program of restoration and maintenance that aims at recreating the golden age when hotels were more than glass-and-plastic boxes.

"One of the reasons people keep coming back to Raffles is because of the tradition," Pregarz said. "I had an old lady here recently who has visited Singapore as a girl. She came to me complaining very indignantly that someone has removed her mosquito net. I explained that mosquitos no longer constitute a problem here and that we did away with the nets long ago, but she refused to listen."

"She said, 'at Raffles one always sleeps beneath a mosquito net and I am not going to bed until you have found me one.'"

The staff searched storerooms and closets until they found a mosquito net.

Today there are 30 and 40-storey towers rising near Raffles. The Singapore government has announced plans to construct a 77-storey convention centre next door on the site of the Raffles Institute. It is hoped that the Raffles hotel will stand tall among them for decades to come, a gentle reminder of another time and a different pace.

Such a Lovely Soprano Voice —Pity It Couldn't Be Heard

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff
In a special way, Sunday's and tonight's concerts by Victoria Symphony Orchestra are significant — a milestone in its 35-year history.
The significance belongs to the performance of Gustave Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G major, a difficult work that the orchestra could not have undertaken perhaps as little as two years ago.

Maestro Laszlo Gati poses opposite the Mahler, the lovely Four Last Songs of Richard Strauss and Beethoven's short dramatic overture to Fidelio. Guest artist is a notable Canadian vocal talent, soprano Ann Chornodolska who was last heard here two seasons ago. What a lovely voice. Rich, warm, expressive — the instrument is one of a rare quality indeed. It is also the purveyor of a fine musical intelligence and a sympathetic nature.

But on Sunday we had a problem in really hearing it and were left with the frustrating sense of having missed many nuances of what was surely sensitive phrasing and coloration.

The Four Last Songs were truly Strauss's farewell to life and are deeply poignant and exquisite in their craftsmanship.

But with all due acknowledgement to the fact that the orchestra is more than an accompaniment to these songs, it has to be said that the balance between voice and orchestra was unsatisfactory. It left one with the feeling of groping through foliage for a teasing glimpse of some beautiful bloom one longed to enjoy more fully.

The balance improved quite considerably when Chornodolska joined the orchestra for the fourth movement of the Mahler.

In this bright, folk influenced celebration of joy, the glowing soprano tone soared, the phrases spun out clearly, the mood was one of light and warmth.

There is much to admire in Victoria Symphony's first performance of the Mahler. Interpretively Gati successfully establishes the moods — the general sunniness; the vitality, the suave lyricism and passionate climactic intensity. Percussion has some glorious moments. There is limpid horn playing and a long, richly textured passage for cellos with plucked basses in the third movement.

There is a heartening amount of achievement in this rendering; episodically it is good but it has not yet become a complete and unified whole. — the orchestra, in other words, has not quite succeeded in making the work fully and comfortably its own.

The important violin solo passages are beautifully handled by concert master Sydney Humphreys.

ELDERLY, HANDICAPPED TO HAVE DINNER OUT

Between 70 and 80 tenants of the Battin Fielding housing complex will be treated to dinner out Tuesday.

The tenants of the complex for senior citizens and the handicapped will be hosted by the Battin Fielding Memorial Social Club at the Chinese Village Restaurant.

Dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m., to be followed by entertainment featuring baritone Jock Dunbar and Eric McQuillan of the Wig and Dickie show.

The club raises funds through bazaars and other events and is now keeping $1,500, raised from the last bazaar, to assist the activity centre for the handicapped, now being built on Vernon.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN
It has been illustrated in this column that doubles of slam contracts made in the hope of increasing one's profit seldom pay off, for such doubles virtually tell declarer that the doubler rates to have all the outstanding high cards. And an astute declarer can utilize the knowledge thus obtained to the utmost. Today's deal is a classic example of this point. Sitting South was the late Phil Abrams, of Miami Beach.

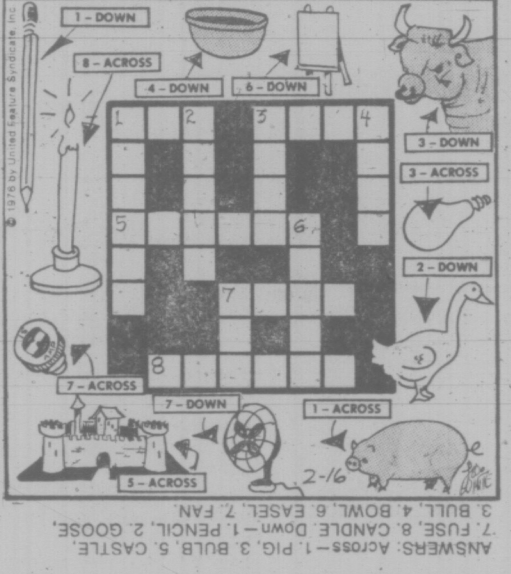

NORTH		EAST
♦ KQ86		♦ 1053
♥ 7642		♥ 3
♦ K3		♦ 109754
♦ A5		♦ 9764
WEST		SOUTH
♦ J942		♦ A7
♥ KQ9		♥ AJ1085
♦ 862		♦ AQJ
♦ 1082		♦ KJ3

The bidding:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 1♠ Pass
2NT Pass 3♥ Pass
4♥ Pass 6♥ Pass
Pass Dbl. Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠.
After West had opened the spade deuce and the dummy was put down, it was obvious to Abrams that West's double was based on the king and queen of trumps, since they were the only picture cards outstanding (plus the jack of spades). Had West not doubled the slam contract, declarer would have played the trump suit in one of two ways: either he would have led the ace and a second trump, hoping to catch the queen or king on the first lead, or hoping that the four outstanding trumps were divided 2-2; or he would have double-finessed by making two trump leads off the board, hoping that East possessed either the queen or king. But with West's double, it was apparent that either of these lines of play would be losing ones.

The opening spade lead was won by declarer's ace, after which a spade was led to dummy's king. A third round of spades was then ruffed. Next came three rounds of clubs, ending in dummy. Dummy's high queen of spades was led, East ruffing and declarer overruffing. The king and ace of diamonds were now cashed, and this was followed by the diamond queen, which was ruffed in dummy.
At this point, with the lead being in dummy, declarer had the A-J-10 of trumps as his last three cards, while West had the K-Q-3. A low trump was led, declarer putting up his ten, which West captured with the queen.
West was not end-played, for he had no choice but to lead away from his K-9 of trumps into declarer's A-J. Thus declarer's only loser was one trump trick to West's queen.

LITTLE PEOPLE'S PUZZLE

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR
Astrological Forecast for Tuesday, Feb. 17

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may feel it necessary to lash out, to act first and think later. Key, however, is to strive for balance, to analyze and to act on factual information rather than emotion. There are services, obligations which should not be ignored.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Dig deep for information — be responsible for promises, actions. You gain popularity, you feel more free to express views. Member of opposite sex aids in boosting morale. Capricorn, Cancer figure in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish what you start. Leaving task half-finished would be serious error. Key is to be specific, to line up sights, to set pace and bring goal into focus. Steer clear of crowds, traffic and be especially careful while handling machinery, electrical appliances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight greater creativity, independence and originality. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. Avoid lifting heavy objects. Your back may be more susceptible to injury than is usual. Relative who makes demands should be tolerated, not necessarily obeyed. You'll comprehend!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be pulled in two directions at the same time. One path is unorthodox — it is likely to bring most constructive results. Aquarian is involved. Accent on money, personal possessions and the resolution of "lovers' quarrel."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Social activity accelerates. Diet and some other resolutions could be sorely tested. Gemini, another Virgo and a Sagittarian could be in picture. Accent on the hidden, restrictions, hospital visit which need not be somber.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be willing to review, revise, to tear down and rebuild. Check behind the scenes. A legal snarl could be temporary. Some have emotional flare-ups — don't compound error. Maintain your own balance. If you do, you win.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be ready for change, travel, variety, special dealings with attractive member of opposite sex. Friend tends to argue over trivialities. Don't be drawn into dispute as "third party." Partner or mate seeks financial counsel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Highlight harmony, willingness to be diplomatic. You have more allies than might be imagined. Some, however, are very sensitive. Know it and deal gingerly with persons whose pride needs bolstering. Message will be clarified.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good Moon aspect coincides now with long-range pledge, plan. What seems settled, "immovable" may be "waiting" for right moment — or word. Know it and investigate. Give full play to intellectual curiosity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Involvements 'creativity' — these areas are highlighted. What is hidden could be revealed. What is obscured could be plain, direct, dynamic. Money affairs can be openly planned, talked about — with one who had been a problem about practical matters.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Now is time to reach beyond limitations. You are due for added recognition. Aries, Libra may be in picture. Accent on legal affairs, public relations, long-range commitment. Money is involved — protect your assets.

IF FEB. 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are an organizer, a fighter for the oppressed, you are unorthodox, subject to a variety of moods, stubborn and creative. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. You may change residence this year — domestic situation will be "adjusted." February and November will be your most significant months of 1976.

"What's the time?" Ann asked. "It must be getting on for four o'clock."
Fred checked. "It is," he replied. "In a moment it will be 15 times as many seconds before the hour as it will be minutes after three."
What would the time be that afternoon?
(Answers tomorrow)

ROMANCE PRESERVED

LONDON (AFP) — Workmen shifting Medieval paintings in the historic Romsey Abbey south of here have come across a perfectly preserved 850-year-old rose.
It was discovered in a recess that was sealed in 1120, and experts believe it may have been left there by a romantically inclined mason who took part in building the abbey.
Romsey Abbey was famed for its roses at the time of William Rufus, son of William the Conqueror.

The 12th Olympic Winter Games came to a close at Innsbruck in typical homespun Austrian fashion Sunday with children showering the athletes with flowers. Russia and East Germany dominated the games, taking a majority of the medals, and Canada made its best showing since 1960, finishing in 11th place. Kathy Kreiner won a gold in skiing, Cathy Priestner a silver in speed skating and Toller Cranston a bronze in figure skating. (Page 14)

The Bernie Sparkes rink from Burnaby had some close calls but took the unbeaten road to capture the Pacific Coast men's championship Sunday at Victoria Curling Club. Sparkes now faces Kamloops' Darryl Will in a best-of-three provincial final that gets under way at Victoria Club this evening at 7. Page 19.

Victoria sprinter Joyce Yakubovich, who captured two gold medals in the Pan-American Games in Mexico, scored another double Saturday in an indoor track and field meet at Winnipeg. She won the women's 400 metres and anchored Canada's 4x400-metre relay team to a victory that produced a Canadian open record. Page 18.

String Of Bombs Exploded

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army exploded a string of bombs around British Army headquarters in downtown Belfast today, seriously damaging the city's main post office and forcing evacuation of the high command.

The bombings, plus attacks on the British Army outposts outside town, were seen as another phase of the IRA campaign of revenge for the death of hunger striker Frank Stagg last week.

Although no deaths were reported in the latest incidents, they followed the massacre of three Catholic women Sunday night in a farmhouse north of Belfast.

Beirut Man Shot Down

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Gunmen shot and killed a municipal worker in Beirut today, scattering pedestrians and shopkeepers from streets in the area and jolting the slow recovery from 10 months of civil war.

Meanwhile, Syrian pressure brought Moslem and leftist leaders into line today behind the political reforms designed to end the Moslem-Christian civil war in Lebanon.

After a series of conferences with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdulkhalim Khaddam, some retracted statements rejecting the Syrian-sponsored reforms which President Suleiman Franjeh announced Saturday night. Radical Palestinian guerrilla groups toned down their objections.

MPLA WILLING TO NEGOTIATE?

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — The government is treating with cautious optimism reports that the Soviet-backed Popular Movement (MPLA) in Angola is prepared to talk rather than fight South African forces in southern Angola, informed sources said today.

But no contacts, direct or indirect, have yet been made.

South Africa has indicated it would withdraw its forces, believed to number 4,000 or 5,000 men, if it were given guarantees of the safety of important hydroelectric installations there and an assurance that the border would be respected.

Cabinet ministers were giving careful study today to a statement by the MPLA foreign minister, Jose Eduardo dos Santos, in a French newspaper interview, that South Africa could protect its interests in Angola if it recognized the MPLA government in Luanda.

Following that, MPLA leader Agostinho Neto has reported to have undertaken in a speech that the MPLA would not intrude in South-West Africa.

MONTREAL (CPI) — Canadians pay on average at least 10 per cent too much for food, because of declining competition among supermarkets, a study commissioned by the food prices review board says.

The 171-page study, says the drop in competition among the country's four largest food retailers — Weston-Loiblav, Dominion, Canada Safeway and Steinberg's — has resulted in higher prices, wastefulness, over-size operations and a decrease in customer services such as credit, free delivery and telephone ordering.

The report says these chains handle a high concentration of food sales — as much as 93 per cent in certain areas — throughout Canada.

The study was undertaken by Bruce Mallen, a Montreal marketing expert hired in mid-1974 at a fee of $25,000 by a joint board chairman Beryl Plumptre. Although it was completed in December, the study has yet to be officially endorsed or disavowed by the board.

Mallen, a marketing professor at Concordia University in Montreal and former vice-president of the Marketing Association of Canada, prepared the report with data from 32 urban centres across the country.

The study showed supermarket prices in the Prairies to be the highest, with consumers paying six or seven cents more than necessary on a dollar.

Mallen noted in an interview on CBC Radio today that Victoria was one of the least competitive supermarket areas in the country.

The report recommends that legislation be passed to restrict further expansion of supermarket chains in markets where they are already major influences.

The study concludes "that the Canadian food-retail trade does have very high levels of concentration in urban areas; that these levels are rapidly growing; that the four national chains play the major role in this phenomenon; that barriers to shopping-centre sites and economies of local advertising appear to be the VANCOUVER (CPI) — City police are looking for thieves with gourmet palates after a weekend robbery at a West End restaurant.

Police say that in addition to taking a fur coat and a leather coat, a man and two women carted off 10 lobster tails, six tins of escargots, 20 New York steaks, 10 pork tenderloins, 24 top sirloin steaks, 10 prawns and 15 shrimp.

They also took four bottles of sauce for seasoning and a box of strawberry cheese cake for dessert.

Police estimated the value of the stolen items at $900.

NEWS BRIEFS

Flights Disrupted

MONTREAL (CPI) — Air Canada flights were disrupted today when about 150 ramp workers at Montreal's Dorval airport walked off the job in protest against the suspension of a union shop steward, an Air Canada spokesman said.

The workers, members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, walked off at the start of the 7 a.m. shift and there was no indication when they would return, he said.

Icelandic Strike?

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — Iceland's 10,000 private employees, demanding higher wages and benefits, threatened to go on a nationwide strike at midnight tonight, paralyzing this island nation of 200,000 population.

Flu Sweeps Britain

LONDON (UPI) — One person in every 30 in Britain has the flu, health officials estimated today. They said about 150 deaths related to the disease were reported last week, compared with 50 the week before. Hospitals were on "yellow alert," cutting down on routine admissions to make room for flu victims.

Peron Challenged

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Bombs exploded at seven sites in the Buenos Aires area today at the outset of a 24-hour strike by shop owners, industrialists, cattlemen and farmers challenging the authority of President Isabel Peron. Police reported bombs caused damage at five Fiat auto agencies and two bank branch offices in the capital and suburbs early today.

Citizens' Group Rejects Munro's Blockade Call

Concerned Citizens' Association of International Woodworkers of America, said Saturday in Prince George motorists "might have to consider blocking roads and bridges" to force a rollback in auto insurance rate increases.

He said the association had tried to be responsible in its opposition to the rates imposed for B.C. drivers by the Insurance Corp. of B.C., and in calling for a rollback on premiums to no more than 20 per cent of 1975 rates.

He termed "unfortunate" statements by B.C. Federation of Labor vice-president Jack Munro Saturday suggesting protests take the form of blocking roads and bridges to force a rollback.

"At this time we wouldn't endorse that action. But we can't govern what individual conscience dictates," Black said.

Asked today about Munro's remarks, ICBC president Pat McGeer said if the B.C. Federation of Labor wants to come into the insurance business the government would welcome them.

"We don't want to have the insurance business exclusively in B.C., so the B.C. Federation can come in."

The Concerned Citizens Association, co-sponsored by the B.C. Federation of Labor, is concentrating its efforts on organizing more members and coordinating ideas for opposing the high cost of auto insurance.

Black said a petition which has been circulating for a month on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island will be taken to other parts of the province and it was hoped 750,000 signatures — nearly all car owners — would be obtained.

He said the association expected to be in a better bargaining position when the legislature opens March 17.

Munro, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, said Saturday in Prince George motorists "might have to consider blocking roads and bridges" to force a rollback in auto insurance rate increases.

Replying to a question from one of 350 people attending a rally protesting premium increases by ICBC, Munro said he is not in favor of trying to organize a general strike on the issue because it wouldn't be successful.

"There are a lot of other things people can do to keep this issue alive and pressure the government to roll back these exorbitant increases."

"If the government keeps ignoring protest demonstrations and petitions, we might have to consider blocking roads and bridges."

Vancouver "could practically be paralysed by using 400 or 500 cars to blockade the four main bridges," he said.

In Prince George, "the same thing could be achieved by blocking key roads, especially access routes to the city."

In an earlier speech to the rally, Munro said everybody in B.C. should go on the same day to buy their car insurance at ICBC offices or motor vehicle branch offices, "and cause one giant traffic jam."

Munro's suggestion received enthusiastic applause from the audience but was not put to the rally for formal endorsement.

The meeting passed a resolution calling for a rollback of ICBC rate increases to no more than 20 per cent greater than last year and for restoration of the $18 territorial discount for northern motorists.

Insurance rates have doubled for more motorists and have increased threefold for unmarried male drivers under 25 years of age.

Defence Minister James Richardson today said there is a possibility that negotiations for 18 Lockheed Orions will collapse unless the scandal-ridden U.S. corporation can overcome serious financial problems.

Richardson told a news conference he had been assured by Lockheed board chairman Robert Haack during a 90-minute meeting that a new financing arrangement could be expected later this year.

"The difficulty has not been resolved," Richardson said. Lockheed's "loss of image" meant the negotiation period for the $950-million contract could take longer than Canada had anticipated.

Canada's decision depends partly on whether Japan signs a contract for Lockheed planes. If Japan does not, this would affect subcontracts to the Canadian aircraft industry that a defence spokesman said run close to the $950 million Canada would pay for its 15 planes.

The Japanese sale has been affected by the results of a U.S. investigation that has found that Lockheed paid bribes to foreign officials to get contracts.

The scandal forced the resignation last Friday of Lockheed chairman Daniel Houghton, who was succeeded by Haack, and vice-chairman A. Carl Kotchian, succeeded by Roy A. Anderson.

In Tokyo, millionaire Kenji Osano denied under oath today that he helped Lockheed sell planes in Japan and said he is considering suing the U.S. aircraft company's former president for defamation.

Osano, a close friend of former premier Kakuei Tanaka, was the first witness as the parliamentary budget committee's investigation into Kotchian's report that his company paid $12.3 million to boost its sales in Japan between 1955 and 1973.

Kotchian told a U.S. Senate subcommittee Osano was helpful in Lockheed's drive for Japanese sales. Osano testified he met Kotchian several times, but he denied he assisted him in pushing aircraft sales or even discussed such sales with him.

Osano, an influential businessman who owns or controls 89 companies, including six hotels in Hawaii, said his lawyer is analyzing Kotchian's statement to the subcommittee to determine whether Osano has grounds for legal action against Kotchian.

Richardson said today in Ottawa he is convinced no Canadians have received bribe money in connection with a contract under negotiation to buy $950 million in long-range aircraft from Lockheed.

Richardson said top officials of Lockheed assured him today for the second time no Canadians had been bribed in the deal. He said he believed them.

The federal cabinet gave approval in November for negotiation of a contract for 18 long-range patrol aircraft to replace the aging Argus anti-submarine patrol planes.

He also said the Lockheed contract would provide about $950 million worth of business in Canada and create some 6,000 jobs over a 15-year period.

HOLIDAY PAY CLAIMED

B.C. Government Employees' Union filed a grievance today against the government's decision to rescind Heritage Day.

Union general secretary John Fryer said about 35,000 government employees are entitled to holiday pay despite the government's decision not to recognize the holiday.

According to the government's contract with the BCGEU Heritage Day was to be recognized as a designated paid holiday once it was proclaimed by cabinet.

An order-in-council Jan. 20 set today as Heritage Day but the order was rescinded Friday and this week was designated Heritage Week instead.

"After realizing at the last minute that the proclamation entitled BCGEU members to the holiday, the government is trying to wriggle out of this obligation by playing sleight-of-hand tricks with orders-in-council," Fryer said.

He said one solution of the grievance would be double time pay for government employees working today for a total cost to the government of $4 million.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said that when the cabinet proclaimed Feb. 16 as heritage day, it did not know it was entitling 35,000 provincial government employees to a holiday.

Mrs. McCarthy said the government proclaimed the holiday on the understanding the federal government would be making a similar proclamation but this is not expected until next year. She said the federal proclamation was needed to make Feb. 16 a statutory holiday on the provincial level.

She said heritage week will recognize the country's heritage as well as heritage day without costing the province $4 million.

New Airline Chiefs

OTTAWA (CPI) — A new president and a new chairman for Air Canada are expected to be named here today ending almost three months of uncertainty in the airline.

An aide to Transport Minister Otto Lang said that the announcements are expected at a late afternoon news conference.

The aide would not say who has been appointed but it is expected that Claude Taylor, now Air Canada's vice-president of public affairs will become president and chief executive officer.

Pierre Des Marais, a Montreal businessman and Air Canada director, is believed to be the new chairman.

Yves Pratte resigned in a bitter mood as chairman and chief executive officer in late November. He had been under constant fire from politicians and newspapers for his administration of the airline.

Coffee, Oil Prices Set to Zoom

Coffee prices will rise 40 cents per 10-ounce jar within two weeks and heating oil will rise 1.5 cents a gallon to 43.5 cents as the provincial price freeze has come to an end.

Supermarket spokesmen said prices would rise gradually, dictated in part by what competing firms do. The freeze ended at midnight Sunday.

Items that were at unusually low levels when the freeze began Oct. 24, such as manufacturer's specials.

Retail specials could be raised to normal levels during the freeze.

Beginning next week prices will begin to rise on those products under severe cost pressure, mainly coffee, fish, soup and paper products.

Heating oil was caught in the freeze and companies are entitled to an increase of 4.5 cents a gallon on the basis of costs.

Food price increases will be on selected items only. There is no indication of an across-the-board increase for food.

With the ending of the provincial freeze, the only controls are under the federal anti-inflation program, which requires companies to justify all price increases on the basis of higher costs.

Ken Murdoch, spokesman for the provincial department of consumer services, said his department will continue to monitor food and energy prices in B.C. but now will be doing it to help the federal program rather than in connection with its own legislation.

Consumer complaints about price increases are being referred to the Revenue Canada

Anti-Inflation Board hot line at 388-2711.

The provincial department has received printouts of wholesale food prices and will use this as a base for monitoring prices in local stores.

"The important thing to remember is that this is entirely a federal program now and we are helping to monitor the federal program in co-operation with the Anti-Inflation Board."
